

How Wonderful the Patented Super-Six Principle. It is responsible for the largest selling 6-cylinder cars in the world. After ten successful years, the patented exclusive Super-Six principle to-day is responsible for Hudson-Essex being the largest selling 6-cylinder car in the world. How amazing this supremacy to endure so long. New cars, types, and designs succeed each other at breathless rate. Yet, year after year, the Hudson Super-Six with its unchanged patented principle remains the largest selling fine car in the world.

DANGER TO PEKING.

BRITISH OFFICIAL WARNING.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN TO LEAVE.

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT'S ANXIETY.

PLAN TO MOVE LEGATION STAFF.

GREATER SAFETY NEARER THE COAST.

POWERS' NORTH CHINA DEFENCE MEASURES.

Owing to the danger of Peking being involved in disturbances as the result of a possible Northern collapse, official instructions were telegraphed to the British Legation at Peking to warn British women and children residing outside the Legation quarter not to remain at Peking.

Feeling that the American marines in Peking would not be able to assure the safety of the personnel owing to the distance from the coast, the State Department at Washington has prepared a plan for moving the United States Legation to a point near the sea, such plan not to be put into effect, however, unless conditions become more serious.

Military experts who have been investigating the position in North China have come to the conclusion that 16,000 troops are required to protect foreign life and property in Peking and Tientsin. There are already 7,000 troops at these two cities, and each of the major Protocol Powers, it is assumed, will bring the strength of its forces up to the equivalent of one brigade.

READY FOR TROUBLE.

Proposal to Safeguard The Railway.

Shanghai, June 1.
After careful investigation by the military experts it has been decided that the force necessary to protect foreign lives and property in Tientsin and Peking is sixteen thousand.

There are already seven thousand troops of five nationalities.

TSINGTAO PROTEST.

Landing of Japanese Troops Opposed.

Tsingtao, May 31.
Three Japanese regiments totalling 2,000 men have arrived here from Dairen.

The Chinese authorities have protested against their landing.

British, American, Japanese, French and Italian, in these cities.

While the precise number of troops Britain is despatching has not yet been decided, roughly, it is assumed that each of the four major protocol Powers, Britain, America, France and Japan, will have the equivalent of one brigade between Tientsin and Peking.

A proposal has been made and is being investigated to safeguard the Peking-Tientsin railway communications by aeroplane patrol. Legation Quarter Defence.

Regarding the defence of the Legation Quarter, it will be confined to 2,000 men of five nationalities.

Yesterday official instructions were telegraphed to the British Legation at Peking to warn British women and children residing outside the Legation Quarter not to remain in Peking.

These precautionary measures are based on the assumption that a Northern collapse is possible. Although nothing has so far transpired to warrant alarm as regards foreigners, in view of what occurred at Nanking and the general hostility to foreigners in the Yangtze Valley, it is considered imperative to take ample precautions.—Reuter.

TAKING NO RISKS.

Plan to Transfer American Legation.

Washington, May 31.
Anticipating a possible increase in disturbances in North China, President Coolidge has approved

A plan evolved by the State Department for the transferring of the American Legation at Peking to some point nearer the coast, but the plan will not be put into effect unless the conditions become more serious, in which case it is felt that Peking is so distant from the coast, that the American marines stationed there will hardly be able to assure the safety of the personnel of the Legation.—Reuter's American Service.

A CHANGE OF VIEW.

Serious Trouble Now Thought Unlikely.

Peking, May 31.
In view of the steps taken by the principal foreign Powers for greater protection of the Legation quarter and the keeping open of the railway to Tientsin, the recent virtual decision that there should be a general foreign evacuation of the capital has been, at least temporarily, abandoned.

Foreign officials now consider that serious trouble is unlikely and the foreign reinforcements are sufficient to ensure safety in the case of minor disturbances. The capital at present is remarkably peaceful. There are no signs of popular alarm, and the Chinese attitude to foreigners is friendly.—Reuter.

HANKOW AGITATION.

Backed By Nationalist Officials.

Shanghai, May 31.
The meetings and demonstrations of yesterday were openly anti-British and it is known that they were backed by the Nationalist Government officials.—British Naval Wireless.

Kiukiang's Escape.
Kiukiang, May 31.
It was evidently intended that trouble should be stirred up locally as the result of the May 30 demonstrations. It is known that agitators were specially imported to stir up strife, but their

CRISIS IN EGYPT.

Satisfactory Solution Expected.

BRITAIN'S FRIENDLY ATTITUDE.

London, May 31.
It is learned in London, that there is no intention at present of publishing the British Note to Egypt, but it is emphasised that the Note is in no way an ultimatum. On the contrary it is very friendly.

The despatch of warships to Egypt is purely precautionary. It is known that Egyptian mobs quickly get out of hand.

Therefore it is essential to have a force sufficient to protect lives and property, which is Britain's duty under the declaration of 1922.—Reuter.

The Door Still Open.

Cairo, May 31.
The newspapers "Mokattam" and "Ahram" affirm the Government's intention to uphold its viewpoint vis-a-vis Great Britain and declare the British demands do not conform with the 1922 declaration.

The newspaper "Siassah" thinks it strange to see an exchange of Notes on a matter in which Egyptians are clearly in the right, and stranger still to see Britain accompanying her Note with warships.

Britain is strong enough to do what she likes in Egypt but force has never been the basis of right.

In spite of such expressions of opinion, it is expected that a satisfactory solution can be reached.

Prominent Egyptians point out that no decisions have yet been reached as regards the Army and the Chamber War Committee's proposals do not necessarily reflect the policy of the Government.

King Faud has indefinitely postponed his departure for Alexandria.—Reuter.

Debate Postponed.

Cairo, May 31.
The crucial debate on the War Ministry vote due in the Chamber to-morrow has been postponed and will be discussed in the final phases of the Budget, probably on June 10.—Reuter.

efforts were not very successful. Only a few got through to the Concessions.—British Naval Wireless.

Ichang Oil Removed.

Ichang, May 31.
Yesterday's demonstrations were on a small scale and were not attended with much display of enthusiasm or of anti-foreign feeling.

The evacuation of oil by the American Companies is proceeding smoothly, no interference or opposition having been offered.—British Naval Wireless.

Chinking Procession.

Chinking, May 31.
A large procession passed through the Concession yesterday but was not attended with demonstrations of ill-feeling and this day passed off quietly.—British Naval Wireless.

TIDE OF WAR.

Morale of Hankow Troops Suffers.

Hankow, May 31.
The fall of Chengchow to the Hankow party and its abandonment by the Fengtien (Northern) troops is not confirmed although it is apparent that the Northern claims to successes were without foundation.

COLONIAL SERVICES.

Tribute From Prime Minister.

UNOFFICIALS NEXT TIME.

London, May 31.
The Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, received the delegates of the Colonial Conference at No. 10 Downing Street. Mr. Baldwin paid a tribute to the value of the work of the colonial services.

While there is general agreement in favour of continuing the conference in its present form, it is thought it would be advantageous to arrange a session at which there would be unofficial as well as official representatives of the Colonies to consider questions of economics and developments of common interest in the various parts of the colonial empire.—Reuter.

Local weather forecast is: N.E. winds, moderate; overcast at first, finer later.

Meteorological observations at 6 a.m. to-day: barometer, 29.62; temperature, 76; humidity, 94; wind E, force 3.

SOVIET BREAK.

Mails Via Siberia Not Affected.

London, May 31.
In the House of Commons, Sir William Mitchell Thomson, Postmaster-General, replying to Comdr. Kenworthy (Labour) said that the despatch of British mails via Siberia and the transmission of telegrams from England to Russia and countries beyond were governed by the terms of international conventions and obligations.

The British and Soviet Governments under these were not affected by the action of His Majesty's Government in respect of the Trade Delegation.—Reuter.

Trade With Russia.

London, May 31.
The Parliamentary Labour Party has established a Committee consisting of Mr. Clynes, Mr. Arthur Henderson and Mr. Sidney Webb to "consider the situation arising from the break with Russia and examine the means of continuing to foster trade." The appointment of the Committee has occasioned some comment in the Lobby in view of the Soviet declaration of intention to withdraw all trade facilities, but the Labour Party is of the opinion that the estrangement cannot last for ever and that the trade should be nursed so that it may revive as soon as possible.—Reuter.

TO-DAY'S DOLLAR.

On account of the continued indisposition of Mr. R. E. Lindsell, Mr. E. A. D. Forrest this morning relieved Mr. E. W. Hamilton as first Magistrate in the big Court at the Central Magistracy.

The closing rate of the dollar, on demand, to-day was 2/0 1/16.

GAMBLING FEVER?

Clothing Alleged To Be Pawned.

CURIOUS COURT CASE.

There was a somewhat surprising turn to a case in the Summary Court this morning, when an apparently simple case of money lent turned into a legal argument between the legal representatives of the plaintiff and defendant as to the laws of the Colony regarding gambling transactions.

A Chinese woman claimed for the return of $100 which she stated she lent to the defendant (another Chinese woman) when the latter came to her in urgent need of funds.

In cross-examination plaintiff denied that she had anything to do with a gaming school at 34 Square Street or that she had persuaded the defendant to accompany her there. She denied that she had encouraged defendant to gamble with her and that in consequence, in a few weeks, the defendant was in her debt to the extent of $1,000.

It was further put to plaintiff that the defendant had pawned articles of jewellery and even her clothing in an attempt to pay back her losses, but that the plaintiff had remained adamant that the money must be paid within a certain time.

Kept "A Prisoner."

Plaintiff denied this and stated that the whole of the case was fabricated. She had never been to the address mentioned and she did not even know how to play the games of chance mentioned.

Plaintiff denied that she had kept defendant virtually a prisoner in her house until certain of the debts had been paid and that whilst a prisoner the defendant had been encouraged to play in an endeavour to recover her losses and had lost a further $500.

Plaintiff stated that the defendant had never been indebted to her for more than the amount claimed in this action and had never pawned articles for her benefit.

The case was adjourned after Mr. C. A. S. Russ (for the plaintiff) had referred briefly to the special defence raised by Mr. Strellett (for the defence).

With regard to the defence that the defendant was not of age at the time and could not be held liable, Mr. Russ said that he could give His Honour (Mr. P. Jacks) authority that it was impossible for an "infant" in this Colony to raise the plea of "infancy" in a Summary Court case.

With regard to the contention of the defence that a gaming transaction was illegal, it was held by the plaintiffs that this was a fabricated story. The old acts of Parliament, said Mr. Russ, never allowed a gambling transaction to be held illegal unless it was against public interests. An instance of the latter contingency was in the case of a bet on the length of life of Napoleon when it was held that the wager was illegal in that it might encourage attempts on his life! It was not until 1892 that gambling transactions and the securities given in respect of them were held to be void.

With regard to the law of the Colony, the Ordinance relating to gambling did not make anything illegal. It was a penal ordinance only and referred only to gambling houses on which there was a ban. There was no Ordinance dealing with what might be called "private" gambling.

CHARGE AGAINST SHROFF.

An assistant shroff employed by the Hong Kong and China Gas Company was this morning charged before Mr. R. A. D. Forrest at the Central Magistracy with the embezzlement of $1,353.51 which he had collected on behalf of the Company.

Mr. H. J. Armstrong prosecuted on behalf of the Company, and accused replied "Yes" when the charge was read to him.

Mr. F. H. Loseby then appeared in Court and said he was for the defence. He entered a plea of "not guilty" on behalf of his client and applied for a week's remand, which was granted.

CHINESE CUSTOMS.

was duly retired in December, 1922, with the proud distinction of being the first of China's domestic loans of which every drawing was held precisely as it fell due.

China then was able at once to issue new loans on the security of the indemnity collections of the Customs Administration, and to retire old internal loans whose gradual disappearance steadily raised her credit. Since 1917 she has been able to secure against indemnity money the following items: The interest on the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 14th year National Loans and on 4th year "Extra" Bonds; the redemption charges on the 3rd, 4th, and 5th year National Loans and the 7th year Long-term National Loan; and the interest and redemption charges on the 13th year Treasury Note issue, the 14th year National Loan, the Continental Bank Loan, the 7th year Short-term National Loan (as described above), the 11th year National Loan, the 14th year National Loan, the 14th year Treasury Note issue, and the Peking Higher Educational Institutions Treasury Note issue. It is not possible to compute how great a saving this has allowed the Chinese authorities to make.

The Customs Surplus.

Though originally it was never imagined that the Customs would provide more than was required for meeting the loan services and the Boxer indemnities, the rise in the value of silver and the big increase in trade provided in 1927 the first surplus over and above all requirements. In that year the surplus was 10 million Shanghai taels; in 1918 it fell to just over 5 million; in 1919 it rose to nearly 21 million. In addition, 1919 saw the first recognition of the claims of the Canton Government to a share in the surplus. During the year, Canton received a pro rata share of 13.7 per cent. of the total release. These payments were stopped on internal dissensions breaking out in 1920, and the Cantonese share, after accumulating until 1921, was allocated to the upkeep of Government institutions and enterprises which were thought to be of value to all China.

The considerable surpluses that have been obtained since 1917 led to the establishment in 1921, at the request of the Peking Government, of the National Consolidated Debt Office, at the head of which sits the Inspector-General. The object of this office is to apply the surplus to meet the obligations on certain internal loans that had fallen into discredit, and whose weakness was causing grave anxiety to the Chinese banks. The office has been subjected to attacks from all quarters, but has successfully resisted the efforts of either Chinese or Europeans to claim a share of the surplus before the consolidated debt charges have been met.

Conclusion.

From the above survey it will be realised how considerable has been the value to China of the orderly management of her Customs, in spite of innumerable functions, which, if they had their own way, would long ago have wrecked the finances of China, her internal and external credits have been strengthened and supported, and her chief source of revenue has been continuously utilized to the benefit of the nation as a whole.

It has been the firm hands of the Inspector-General and his assistants that have alone prevented China from cutting her own financial veins, and committing commercial harikari; and the day cannot be distant when this will be generally recognised throughout the whole of China.

MR. FRANK HODGES.

London, May 31.
Mr. Frank Hodges' resignation as Secretary of the Miners' International was due to pressure exerted by the principal officials of the British Miners' Federation, primarily because he opposed the Federation's policy in last year's coal strike and more recently because he accepted the invitation to become a member of the Central Electricity Board, which the Federation contended was a Government post.

Mr. Cook last week said that if Mr. Hodges did not resign the Secretaryship of the Miners' International, the British Federation would consider secession therefrom.

Mr. Hodges, in an interview, said that he had resigned in order to regain unfettered liberty of thought and action in the pursuit of British interests and especially in order to collaborate in the task of enabling British miners to share in the coming advantages from higher technique of applied science and the sound organisation of the mining industry.—Router.

STORY OF CHELSEA COOK.

London, May 12.

The name "E. Holt" on an article of clothing inside the trunk found in the Charing Cross railway cloakroom led to the identification of the victim.

Mrs. Holt, of Chelsea, identified part of the clothing as formerly belonging to her daughter, which was missed when a former cook, Mrs. Esie Roles, left her service some months ago. This woman lived with a man named Roles in Chelsea, and was understood to be his wife, but she was the separated wife of an Italian waiter, her real name being Minnie Banati.

The waiter to-day identified the remains in the trunk as those of his wife.

MAKING A LIVING.

THEFTS FROM AUTOMATIC MACHINES.

TWO YOUNG MEN CAUGHT.

London, May 14.

The potentialities of cigarette slot machines as a regular source of revenue for thieves was demonstrated at the Hythe Police Court, when two young men pleaded guilty to thefts on cigarettes at Folkestone, Hythe, and St. Albans, and were sentenced to four months' hard labour.

The prosecution stated that the men, for some time past, had made their occupation in life travelling from town to town with a Ford van carrying numbers of brass discs resembling shillings, and have made their living by stealing from automatic machines outside tobacconists' shops.

When arrested, the men had three suitcases, containing 280 packets of cigarettes. Numbers of discs were also found of the exact size and weight of a shilling. The discs were even filed to represent the milling on a coin.

"KINSHAN" FIRING.

CHIEF OFFICER'S LUCKY ESCAPE.

SHOT GRAZES PEAK OF CAP.

Further details have been received regarding the firing by peasants on the "Kinshan" on Monday as the Hong Kong and Macao Steamboat Company's steamer was passing up the Front Beach above Whampoa.

With the arrival in Hong Kong of the "Kinshan" yesterday afternoon it was learned that Chief Officer Stewart had a narrow escape from being shot. He was standing on the port side looking forward through the lowered windows of the forenoon when the shots were fired (from the port side and slightly before the beam).

A Narrow Escape.

The first shot grazed the peak of Mr. Stewart's cap and expended itself in the framework of the wheelhouse screen whilst the second missed Capt. Bell Smith, who was standing to the right of the binnacle on the bridge, by inches, and buried itself in the frame of a window on the starboard side. Another passed through a porthole of the forenoon and was found imbedded in a clothing chest, the property of a seaman.

It is believed that the shots came from four or five men, probably peasants, gathered on the bank. These people, it is thought, may have been seeking revenge for possible damage to crops by the wash of the ship.

THE NAVY'S HELP.

APPRECIATION BY O.S.K.
MANAGER.

In connection with the drifting of the s.s. "Ganges Maru" near Pratas and the response by the British Navy to her signals of distress, it is understood that the Manager of the O.S.K. called on the Commodore yesterday and expressed his appreciation of the action taken by the Naval authorities in despatching Naval assistance to the distressed vessel.

OUR POLICY PRAISED.

A refreshing change from the tendency of certain Chinese elements to "down" everything British is the praise accorded to British policy by the Hon. Mr.
Choo Kia-peng, the senior unofficial member of the Federal Council in the F.M.S. Born in Taiping, Perak, and educated in Malaya Mr. Choo Kia-peng has for many years been a prominent member of the Selangor Chinese Chamber of Commerce and the Selangor Chinese Chamber of Mines. He has thus had practical experience of the beneficent effects of British protection in an Oriental country, and is in a position to weigh up British policy in relation to Oriental peoples. He is but one example of countless Chinese whose successful career has been made possible through the instrumen-tality of wise and fair-minded laws.

"Britain," he says, "stands forward as the good Power, and her policy is calculated to serve the true interests of China.
Nobody can doubt but that this policy will succeed. The Chinese in Malaya are happy, prosperous, and contented, and they have never wavered in their admiration for the administration of the country or their loyalty to the British Crown." Were a consensus of Chinese opinion to be taken amongst the Chinese in the Straits Settlements, British North Borneo, Australia, and other parts of the Empire where Chinese migrate Mr. Choo Kiapeng's verdict would be thorowly endorsed. And they, too, would rejoice that the evil power of Bolshevism in China is waning. There cannot be, so far as the Chinese are concerned, any choice between Bolshevism and British policy either in China itself or abroad. As the London "Times" states, the reasonableness of British policy in China and the excellent discipline of the British troops have clearly begun to impress the more independent and responsible Nationalists, who are using their own eyes instead of looking at the world through glasses made in Moscow. Moreover, they have only to look at the record of the British in their relations with the Chinese in Malaya and elsewhere to come to the conclusion that Mr. Choo Kia-peng is not stretching his imagination in describing Great Britain as the "good Power." If the British have been engaged for decades in the peaceful penetration of China in the interests of their own commerce, the Chinese themselves have also naturally benefited.

There have been few "flies in the ointment" of mutual trading relations, and misunderstandings and misconceptions were always easily dissipated up to the time of the insidious campaign of calumny and invective inaugurated by Moscow's minions. With the elimination of the Communist menace there is nothing to hinder an early restoration of the former happy relations that existed between the British and the Chinese in every part of the great Chinese Republic. In China, as in Malaya, Great Britain will once again come to be regarded as the "good Power." And the nationals of both countries will be enabled to continue their commercial march step by step to the ultimate advantage of both.

To-day's Great Race.

Although unable to see the event as it is run—the day of practical television not yet having arrived—Hong Kong, not less than every other part of the Empire, takes the greatest interest in to-day's great race.
The Derby was first started as long ago as 1780. In the first race, which the Lord Derby of that day arranged, Sir Charles Bunbury won with his chestnut colt, Diomed. The first Royal victory was in 1788, when the

"First Gentleman in Europe" won with Sir Thomas. The race has been run in a hurricane which blew booths and tents over the course; it has been run, absit omen, after a snowstorm.
In its first year the distance was only a mile, but the winning-post of 1780 stood where the winning-post stands to-day, and though we may wonder what the eighteenth century sportsmen would have thought of the crowds and the motor-cars of today, though London has so devoured the country that to go to the Derby by road is to drive through a continuous town, though the old humours of that journey have been destroyed by the speed of modern traffic, still the fair on the Hill is busily merry as it was when Frith painted his record of a Victorian Derby, and those who watch from the Grand Stand still look upon the same landscape of green down and woodland and distant spire as the sportsmen of 1780 saw when they planned the race.
Our British love of horse-racing is indeed much older than the Derby. King James I. had his jockeys and bought blood-stock. Mr. Pepys saw races on the downs above Epsom wells, and, like a good fellow, let his clerk go and see them when he could not get away himself.
Charles II. took his Court to Newmarket, and the Rowley Mile —for he was called Old Rowley after his favourite hack—still preserves the memory of his love of the turf. Before his century was out all England had learnt the thrill of racing, and there were meetings all over the country.

BONE BOILING.

"OFFENSIVE TRADES" AREA RESTRICTION.

SANITARY BOARD MEETING.

Arising out of an application for an "offensive trade" licence at 96 Apia Street, Shamshui, the desirability of restricting such trades as bone storing and bone and soap boiling to particular areas was discussed at yesterday's meeting of the Sanitary Board.

The M.O.H., Dr. G. W. Pope, was of opinion that the application should be refused as "offensive trade" licences for the trade in question should, he thought, be confined to Tai Kok Tsui.

Mr. N. L. Smith, the Chairman, in supporting Dr. Pope, said that the Board had a right to determine the whole question as to areas in which offensive trade licences might be held and the M.O.H. had been asked to work out a definite scheme for such restriction.

After further discussion, it was decided to refuse the application on the understanding that if when the comprehensive scheme for the restriction of areas was prepared it was found that the present licence applied for would conform to it, the applicant would be given the opportunity of renewing it.

Those present at the meeting were Mr. N. L. Smith, (chairman), Dr. S. W. Tso, Mr. Wong Kwongtin, Dr. S. C. Ho, Mr. J. P. Braga, Col. Boyd-Smith, Dr. G. W. Pope,
(acting M.O.H.), Mr. H. T. Jackman, (acting D. P. W.) and Mr. D.
Davies, (secretary).

TWO BOYS.

STOLEN IN HONG KONG FOR SALE.

KIDNAPPER SENTENCED.

Seen leading two youths ashore at Macao from a Hong Kong junk, a Chinese aroused the suspicion of the police, and not being able to give a satisfactory account of himself was arrested and sent back to Hong Kong.

There was a sequel in Major Willson's Court yesterday afternoon when the man was charged on two separate counts of kidnapping, and on a further charge, of harbouring one of the boys.

The accused admitted kidnapping one of the youths, but denied the charge with regard to the others, who, he said, was an assistant in his uncle's tailoring shop and disappeared when sent out to take orders from customers. Speaking about this youth accused said he found him destitute sleeping in the streets. He took pity on him and shared his mat with the youth.
They lived a hand to mouth existence together getting odd jobs to do, and on two occasions they had to pawn some of the boy's clothing to raise money to buy food. Then a visitor from Macao offered to adopt the youth. He took the homeless boy to Macao because he wanted to do him a good turn.

According to the boy, whose parents lived in the country, he was sent to Hong Kong in the care of his tailor uncle to make a career for himself. While out canvassing orders for his uncle on May 8, he was accused by a man in Hollywood Road. Representing himself to be a detective, accused searched the boy and then removed him to Yau-mat by launch. After living some days in Yau-mat he was beaten by accused to force him to agree to change his name and recognise accused as his father. When accused was satisfied the youth had learned his lessons, he took him to Macao in a junk.
Accused was arrested by the police
as soon as they landed in Macao.
Major Willson convicted on all counts and sentenced accused to terms of imprisonment amounting to eight months' hard labour.

DUG OUT.

BURIED MEN RESCUED ALIVE.

A landslide occurred at Mong-kok yesterday afternoon at a spot where a gang of coolies was at work cutting the hillside. Two men were buried under the fallen earth. Thanks to the promptness with which the alarm was given, an engine from the Kowloon Fire Station was early on the scene and after five minutes of hard work the two buried men were dug out still alive. They were taken to the Kwong Wah Hospital where hopes are entertained for their recovery.

SECOND BODY FOUND.

The body of a Chinese girl was recovered from the harbour near Cheung Chau yesterday. It bore marks of foul play and has been identified as one of the two boat girls who disappeared after their sampler was taken from the Ping On wharf to Yau-mat Bay and looted. The body of the other girl was picked up last week near Green Island, with three stab wounds in the forehead. So far no clue has been found as to the identity of the murderer.

Mr. R. M. Dyer, (chief manager of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Co., Ltd.) proceeded on home leave to-day with Mrs. Dyer, sailing on the "Empress of Canada" via Vancouver.

A CASE OF WHISKY.

BROUGHT ASHORE WITHOUT PERMIT.

A TECHNICAL OFFENCE.

Messrs. Swayne and Hoyt Inc., were this morning summoned before Major Willson at the instance of the Import and Export Office for importing a case of whisky without an import permit.

Mr. L. E. Nantz, the Company's agent, admitted a technical offence, explaining that the whisky was declared in the ship's manifest.
Usually all cargo arriving by the Company's ships was handled by the Hong Kong Tug and Lighter Company. In this case the whisky, which was of small value, was taken ashore in his launch, and through an oversight on the part of one of the Company's clerks, the permit was not taken out. The whisky was in fact intended for Bangkok, and was taken ashore to be transferred to another ship.
The fact that they had applied for a permit to take the whisky showed that there was no intention to defraud with regard to the import duty.

While it was admitted that there was no attempt at malpractice with regard to the duty of $12, it was pointed out on behalf of the Import and Export Office, that in the one mention of the whisky in the manifest of the s.s. "Pawlet," there was nothing to show the liquor was being brought ashore, and it having been landed without a permit there was no means of tracing its whereabouts here, and the whisky could have been substituted. The position was that the Import and Export office received an application for an export permit before they were aware of the whisky having been imported. The offence was recorded as a serious offence of Customs regulations not only in Hong Kong but all over the world.
A fine of $50 was imposed.

WIFE'S CLAIMS.

SEPARATION PROCEEDINGS OPENED.

Before Major Willson this morning, Mr. Horace Lo mentioned a case in which Mrs. Hallina Hyder is summoning her husband, Mr. B. A. Hyder, under Ordinance No. 10 of 1906.

Mr. Lo said that his client was asking the Magistrate to make orders in her favour as follows:—
(1) that the defendant having deserted his wife she be no longer bound to co-habit with him; (2) that she be given custody of the two children of the marriage; and
(3) that the defendant pay for her maintenance and costs.

The usher reported that both parties were not in Court.

Mr. Lo said Mrs. Hyder was represented, but he did not object to a week's adjournment to enable Mr. Hyder to answer the summons, remarking that the case should not give much trouble as he thought the defendant would not contest the claim.

An adjournment was given until 11.30 on June 8.

Mr. Lo: If defendant again fails to appear will your Worship be prepared to deal with the case?

Major Willson: Yes.

Mr. Lo: I don't think he will turn up.

SEAMAN'S SERIOUS OFFENCE.

As the result of complaints made to the police by the Naval authorities, an unemployed seaman named Harry A. Schoonbeck was charged, before Mr. W. Schofield at the Terminal Magistrate yesterday afternoon with keeping an illegal house at No. 179 Woosung Street and with living on the earnings of a Chinese girl who was jointly charged with him on the first count.

The police raided the house on May 14 and seized a book in which sums of money were entered, and a box bearing the names of four girls each of whom was allotted a separate compartment in the box.
There was a fifth compartment marked "Beer."

A sailor deposed to frequenting the house while a soldier was also stated to have visited the place.
Accused said the book represented the girls' budgets. He entered their expenses in it at their request.

Mr. Schofield convicted remarking that the offence was made more serious because the place was frequented by Service men.

Schoonbeck was sentenced to two months' jail and a fine of $100 or an additional month on the charge of "keeping." Sentence of three months' hard labour was passed on the second count.

Finding that there was not sufficient evidence to show that she actually kept the house, the Magistrate discharged the girl.

In the article on the improvement of Tai Wan Bay, published in the "China Mail" yesterday, a tentative scheme was outlined which it was stated had been proposed by Mr. H. B. Rouse, the engineer in charge of general works at the P.W.D. This is scarcely the position. No definite scheme has yet been formulated or plans decided upon. The suggestions which we published merely represented the general lines on which the matter is being considered by the office concerned.

Building Supplement

Special Building Number showing facts of the leading Companies

CHINA MAIL, HONG KONG, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1927.

LAST YEAR'S WORK.

EXCAVATION, PILE DRIVING CO.

DIVIDEND & STAFF BONUS.

BIG RAYMOND SYSTEM BUILDINGS.

The sixth annual general meeting of the Hong Kong Excavation, Pile Driving and Construction Co., Ltd., was held at the registered offices of the company in Powell's Building, yesterday.

YEAR'S WORK SATISFACTORY.

Mr. B. Montague Ede was in the chair, and the following directors and shareholders were present:—Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G., Messrs. Charles L. Shank, Carl B. Shank, Chau Yue-teng, Li Yau-tsun, Chan Pek-chuen.

The notice convening the meeting having been read, the chairman addressed the meeting as follows:—

The result of the year's working, I am sure, you will agree is very gratifying in view of the unsettled trade conditions prevailing during the entire period under review. You will notice from the balance sheet that at the close of the preceding year ending March 31, 1926, $306,453.78 was carried forward after a bonus to staff and dividend of 20 per cent. on the ordinary shares had been paid.

This year's work has proved satisfactory and your directors have decided to declare a 10 per cent. dividend on the ordinary shares.

At last year's general meeting, I pointed out that the large dividend recommended at that time was to be used in payment of a call of $50 per share on the partly paid ordinary shares, which was necessary to meet obligations of the company.

Dividend & Prospects.

Your directors do not feel justified in recommending such a large dividend this year as the 10 per cent dividend recommended will deplete the company's cash reserve by a sum only slightly less than that caused by the higher dividend last year.

While the company, could, no doubt, pay a higher dividend at the present time, your directors do not feel this procedure is advisable due to the difficulty of analysing future prospects on account of the unsettled conditions prevailing throughout the country.

The net working profit for the year has amounted to $218,520.01. Of this profit, $88,189.25 has been absorbed in providing for depreciation in the company's investments, plant, equipments and so forth, reserve for bad and doubtful debts and overhead charges, which leaves a net profit to the Profit and Loss Account of $130,430.76.

Tribute to Staff.

Your directors have recommended a 12 per cent. bonus of the year's salary to all members of the permanent staff. On behalf of the directors, management and the shareholders, I wish to thank all members of the staff for their very diligent services and hard work which have brought about the excellent results obtained. Much closer application is required from members of our staff than from most companies, due to the fact that our work usually continues throughout the whole year, in many cases week ends and holidays being included, without any interruption except the Chinese New Year. It is these additional services by the staff which make for success, and which are especially appreciated by the company.

After a dividend of 10 per cent. and the bonus to staff are paid, there will be $78,680.76 to be carried forward, which, when added to the profit brought forward last year, makes the total sum carried forward this year amount to $385,134.54.

Sassoon Building, Shanghai.

During the period under review, the company's piling operations under the Raymond system have continued to be satisfactory. The most important piling project undertaken during the year was that in connection with the New Sassoon Building in Shanghai where sixteen hundred 62 feet composite Raymond piles were driven to support the structure. As this is to be one of the largest and heaviest buildings in Shanghai, the architects for the project gave much thought to the particular piling that should be used. After much consideration had been given to various piling systems, the Raymond pile was chosen as being the best pile to carry the enormous loads in question.

Cheaper Than Wood Piles.

The virtue of this system was so apparent to the architects that only ordinary preliminary tests were required, and now that the work is completed, the architects are more than ever convinced that they made the correct selection of piling for this exceptional heavy structure. Incidentally, the total cost of the Raymond piling for this project proved to be considerably lower than the total cost of the increased number of wood piles that would have been necessary had wood piles been used.

Other piling contracts undertaken during the year have proved equally successful as our Shanghai operation and it is only to be expected that the popularity of the Raymond system of piling throughout the Far East will steadily increase.

Kowloon Tong Burden.

In my speech of last year's annual meeting, I mentioned the burden under which the company was labouring in connection with the Kowloon Tong and New Territories Development Co., Ltd. This burden still exists notwithstanding the fact that the Kowloon Tong project is now recognised as being a successful undertaking. The Kowloon Tong Co. being a non-capital company has never had sufficient funds to carry the scheme ahead on the mass production basis originally planned. To add to this handicap, many of the subscribers for one reason or other, have not found it convenient to meet their calls on their houses as they become due, and there are instances where houses have been practically completed with a large proportion of the calls remaining unpaid. The Kowloon Tong Co. does not have the funds to carry on the work when calls are not paid, so the burden of financing the scheme has been thrown upon this company until the company's present commitments stand at a very high figure.

Noteworthy Feats.

Two other noteworthy projects completed by the company during the year were the Shamshuipo Military Camp and the Tung Shan Hotel.

The Shamshuipo Military Camp was a contract for the construction of 84 buildings to accommodate two battalions of troops. Only sixty days were allotted for the completion of this scheme. Notwithstanding the delay caused by inclement weather and the necessity of securing lumber for the scheme from Shanghai, all the work was completed in forty-five days from the date of signing the contract, fifteen days in advance of the time allotted by the Government for completion.

Company's Efficiency.

This is probably the largest construction project ever executed in this Colony in such a short period of time and it speaks well for the high efficiency of the company's organisation.

Early in March the company completed the Tung Shan Hotel which is an eight-storey reinforced concrete structure building faced with granite and Shanghai plaster.

Many other contracts have been undertaken by the company during the year, amongst which are the formation of twenty-one building sites on Inland Lot No. 2354, Stubbs Road, the Bowen Road rapid gravity filter beds.

New Contracts.

Since the close of our year, the company has been successful in securing several major contracts including the construction of the New Wong-wei-cheong nallah and also other contracts of smaller magnitude, which, if successfully carried out, should ensure another very favourable balance sheet at the close of our next fiscal period.

I think I have now touched all the points on which you require information and I now beg to propose that the Report and Accounts as presented be adopted and passed. When this has been seconded, I shall be pleased to answer any questions from Shareholders to the best of my ability.

Mr. Chan Pek-chuen seconded, and there being no question, the motion was put to the meeting and carried unanimously.

Other Business.

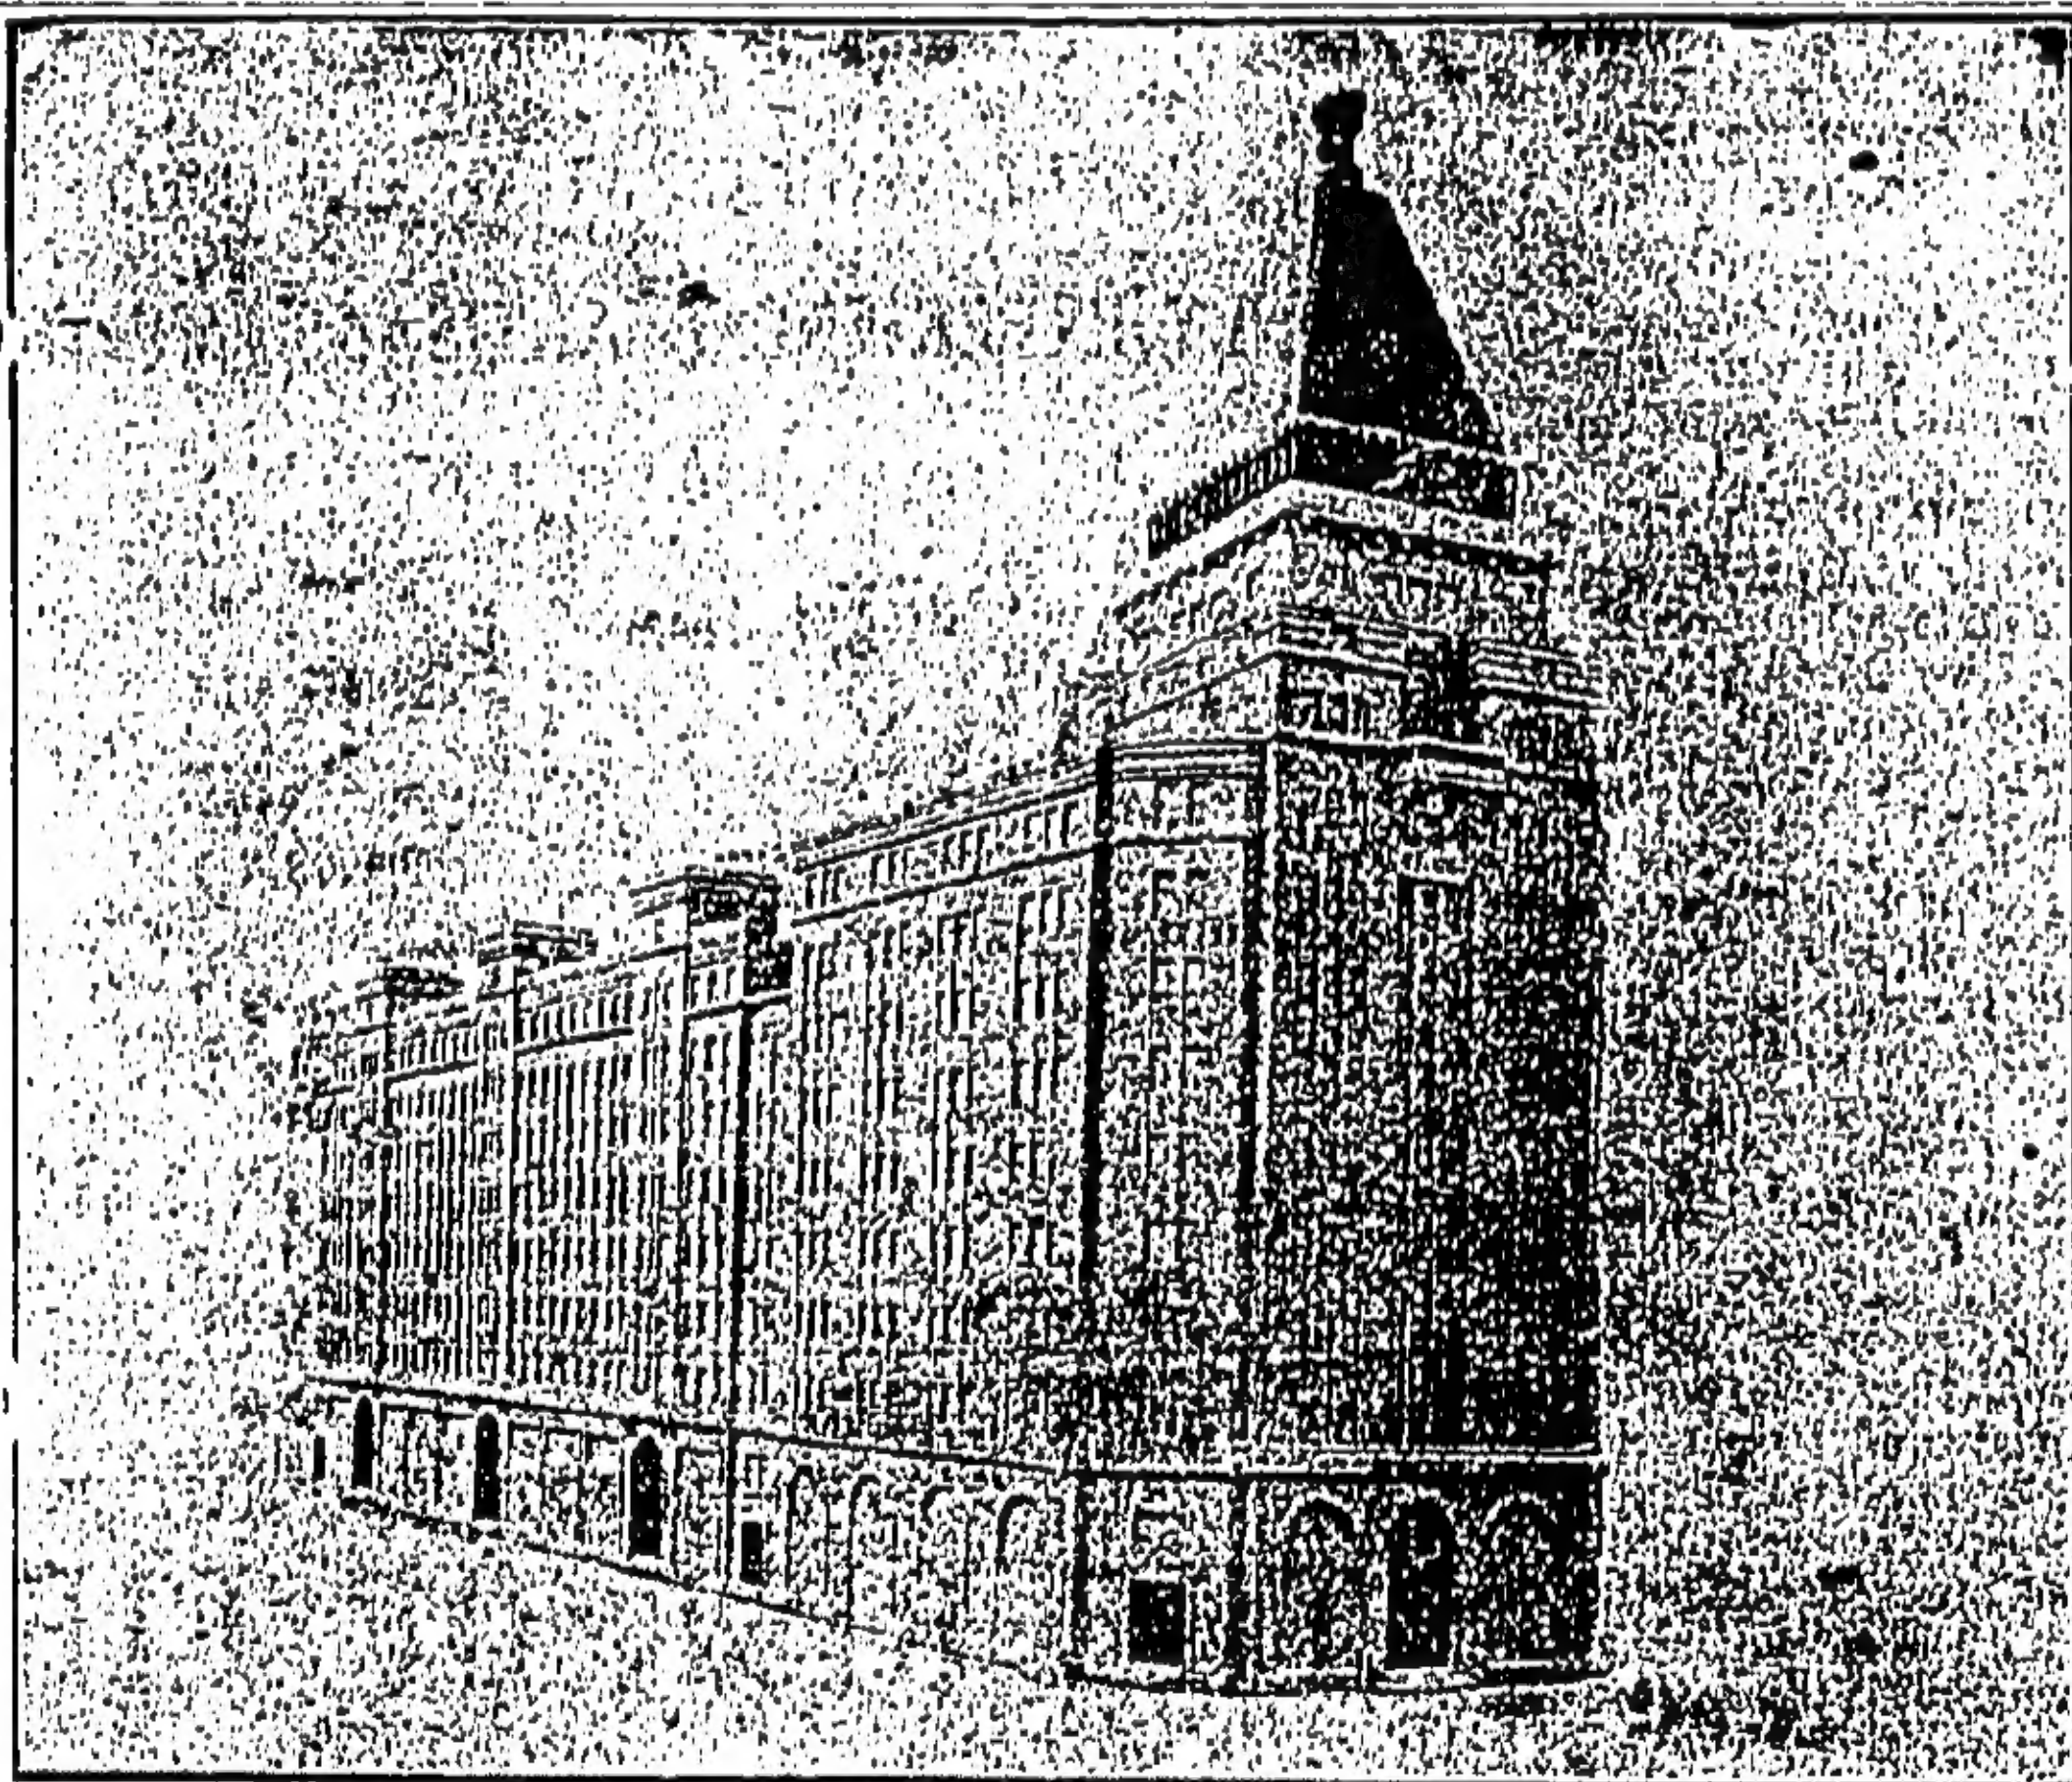

The Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall moved that a dividend of 10 per cent. for the year ended March 31 (to be payable May 31, 1927) be declared. Mr. Chau Yue-teng seconded and the resolution was carried unanimously.

In accordance with the Articles of Association, all the directors retired and the following offered themselves for re-election:—Mr. B. Montague Ede, Mr. Charles L. Shank, Mr. Li Yau-tsun, Mr. Chan Pek-chuen, the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, Mr. Carl Shank and Mr. Chau Yue-teng. Mr. Chau Yue-teng proposed the re-election of the directors for a further period of one year. Mr. Charles L. Shank seconded and the motion was carried unanimously.

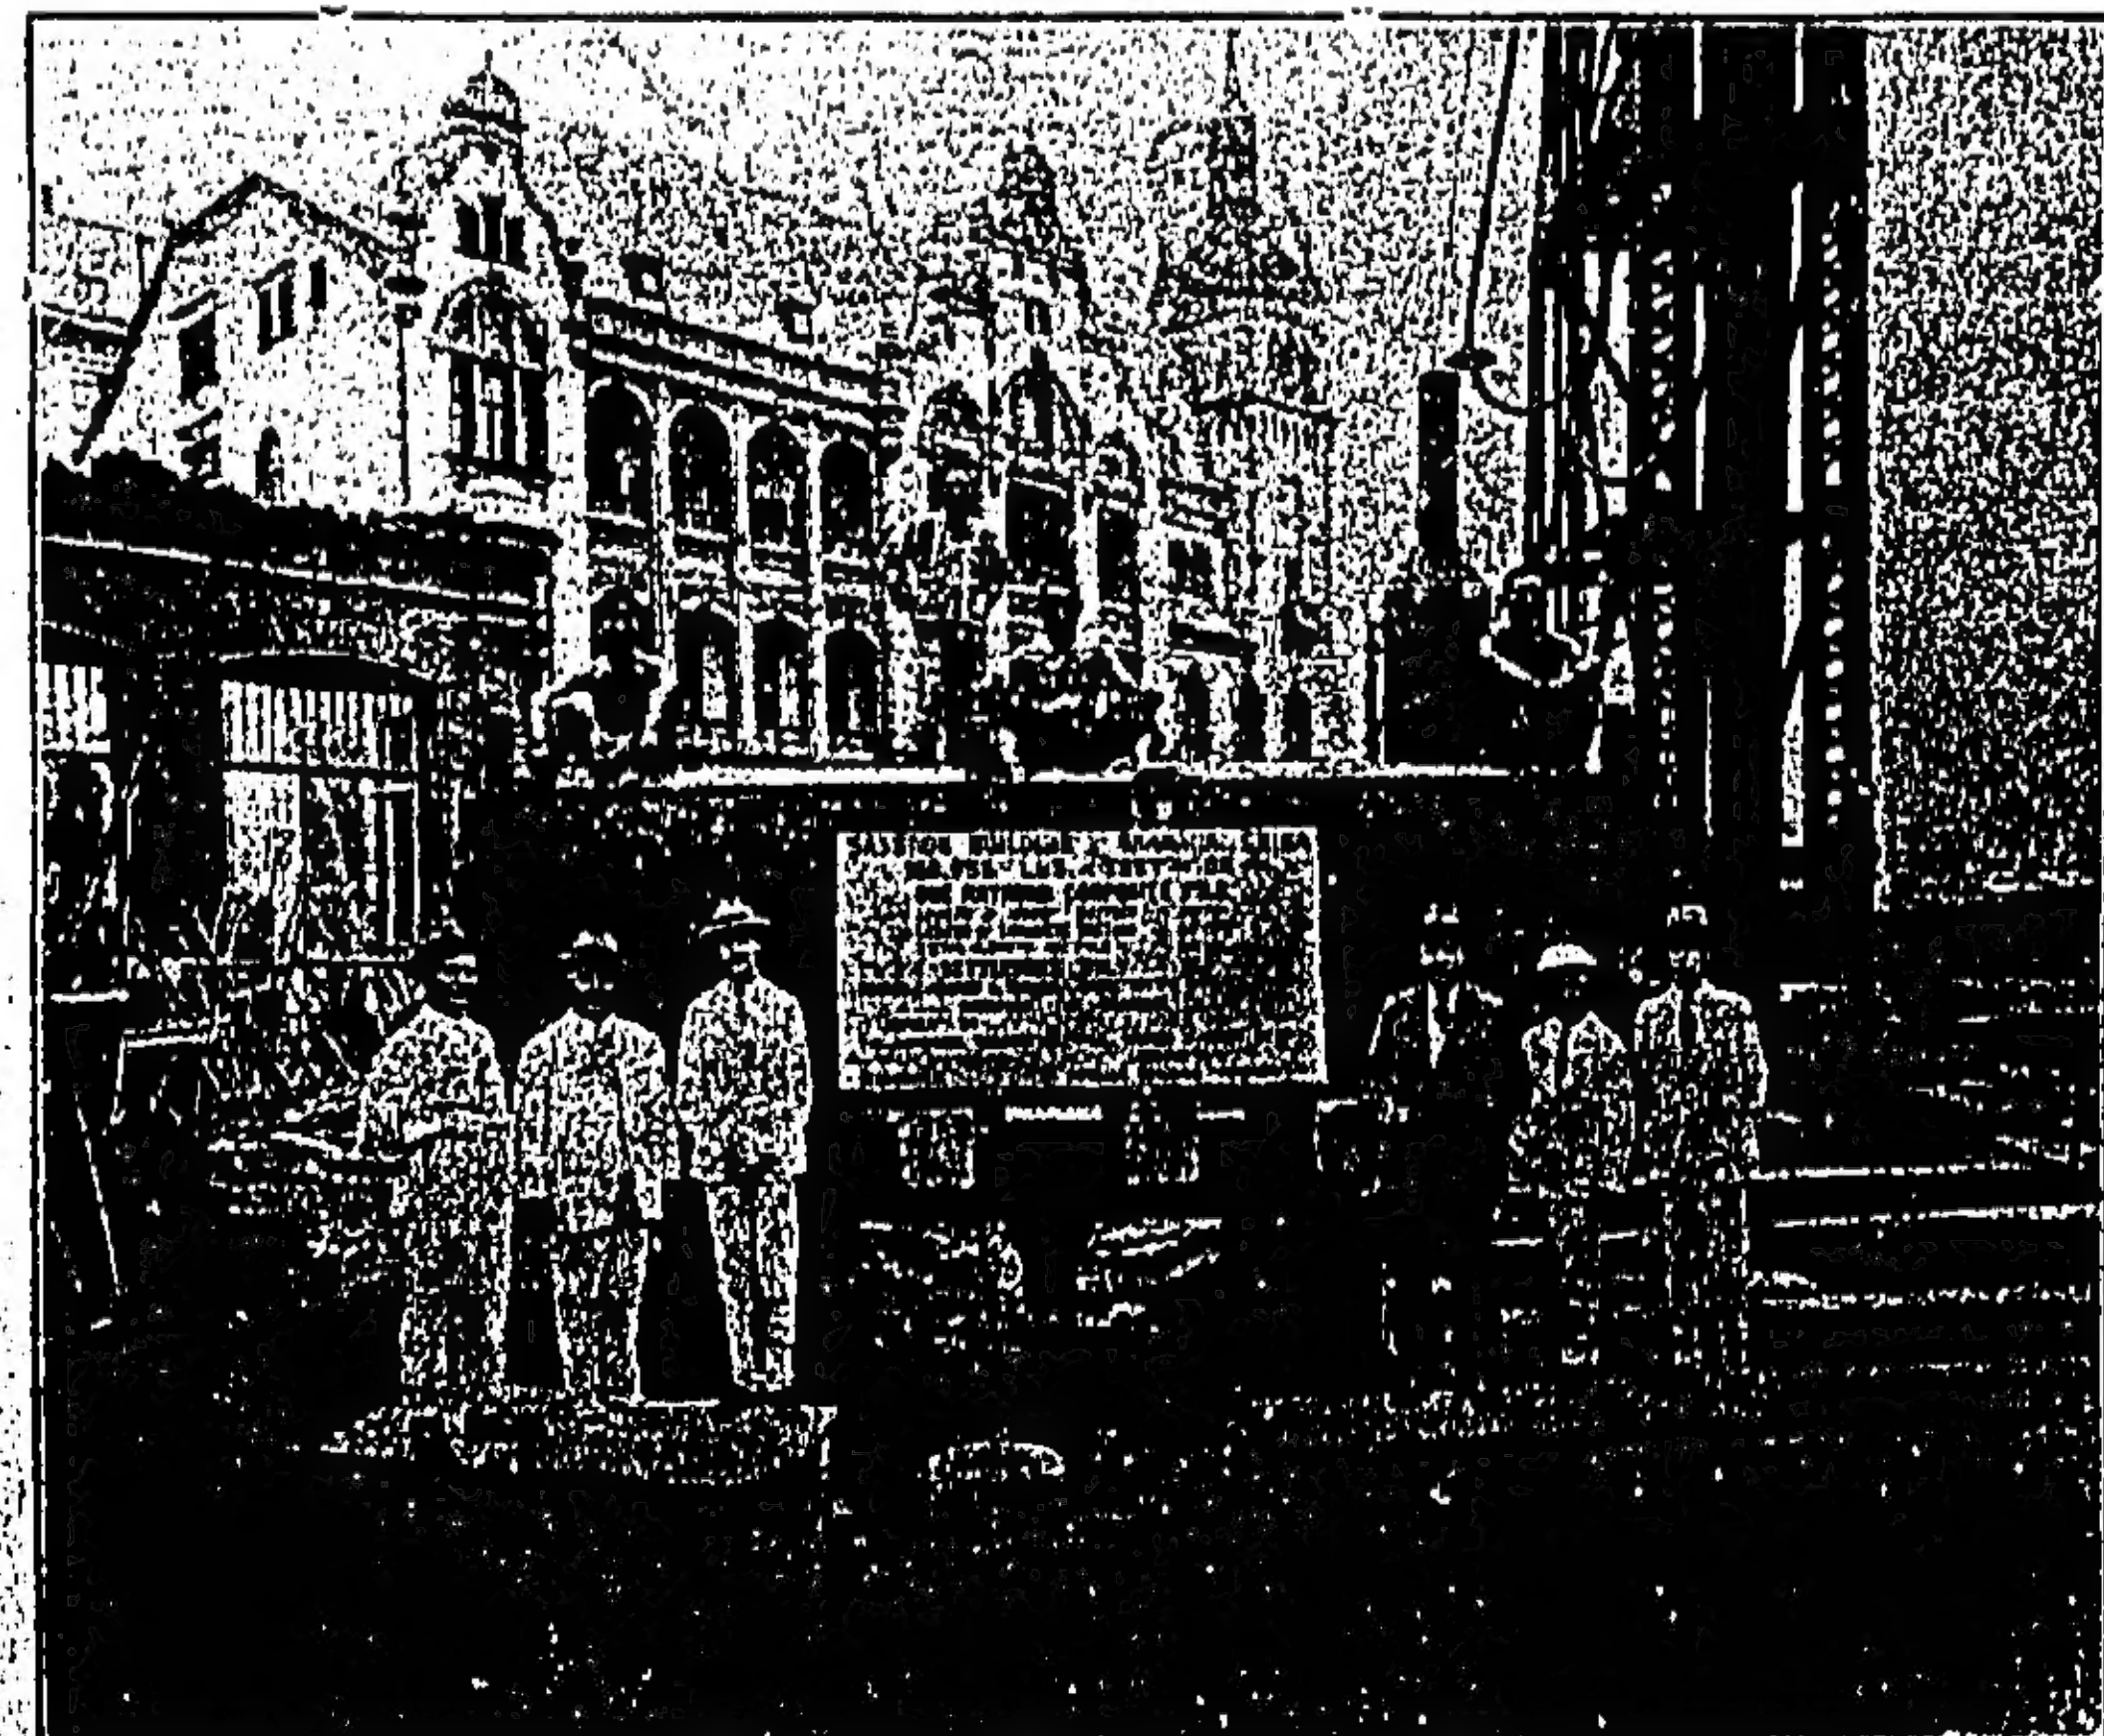

Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews, Chartered Accountants, were re-elected auditors of the company, on the proposal of Mr. Carl B. Shank, seconded by Mr. Chau Yue-teng.

Mr. Charles L. Shank moved that 12 per cent. salaries be paid as bonus to the permanent staff. Mr. Chan Pek-chuen seconded and the resolution was carried unanimously.

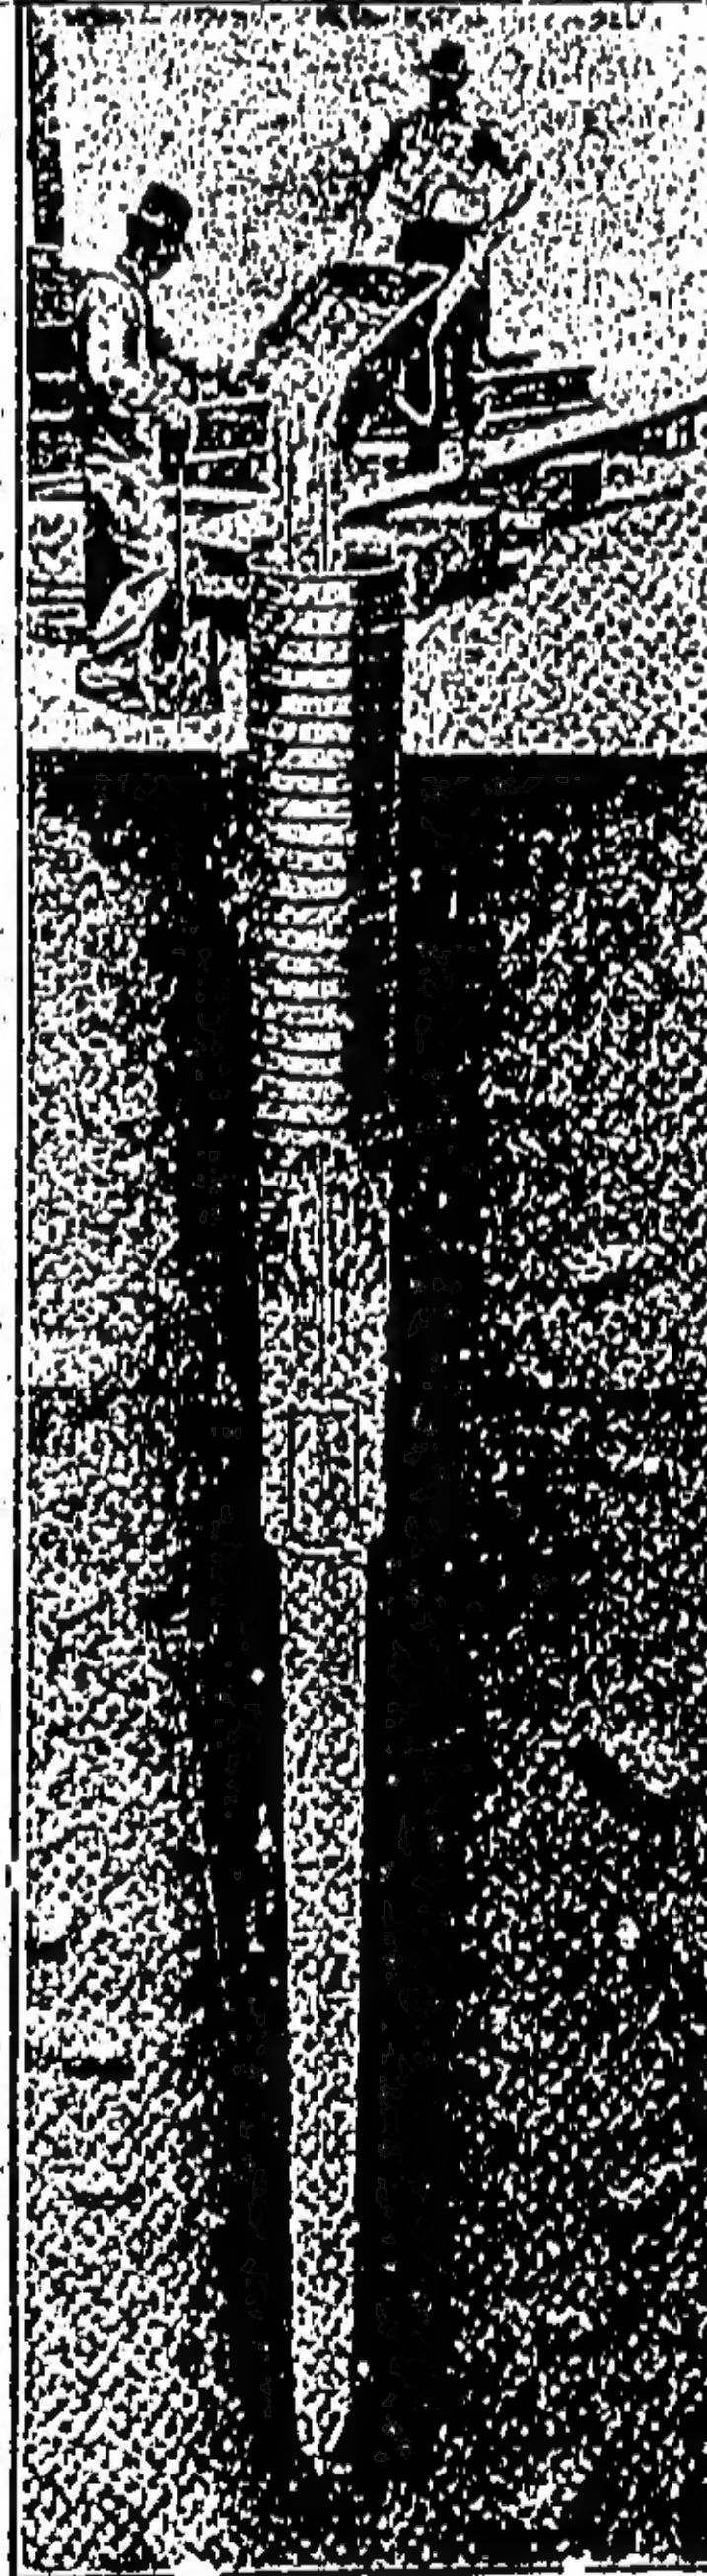

RAYMOND CONCRETE PILES

RAYMOND COMPOSITE PILE.

—RAYMOND PILE VERSUS WOOD PILES:—
1600-62" Raymond Composite Piles replaced more than double the number of 60-0" wood piles that would have been required to carry the total load of the New Sassoon Building now under construction in Shanghai. This means that 1600-62" Raymond Composite Piles will support a greater working load than can be supported on double the number of 60-0" wood piles. And, surprising as it may seem, the cost of the Raymond Piles installed complete has proved to be considerably below the cost of the requisite number of wood piles for the job in question.

TEN POINTS OF SUPERIORITY OF RAYMOND CONCRETE PILES.

- Number 1. Steel shell, driven to refusal, is left undisturbed in the ground and maintains the compression of the soil which is to sustain the load.
- Number 2. The shell, left in the ground, and open to most rigid inspection, enables you to know that the concrete will not be mixed with mud or its strength lost through washing away of cement by ground water.
- Number 3. Varying stratas of earth and semi-plastic soil set up tremendous pressures which will seriously distort and may entirely shear off your pile if unprotected. The steel form, easily inspected, enables you to make sure that this has not happened.
- Number 4. The taper provides maximum economy and enables you to take full advantage of the bearing capacity of your soil.
- Number 5. SPEED. Our method of placing these piles and our equipment have been developed to obtain the maximum of efficiency and speed.
- Number 6. SUPERVISION. Every job, no matter how small, is in charge of a man who is not only a competent executive but a capable engineer who maintains at all times the high quality of our product.
- Number 7. SAFETY. Several hundred tests throughout the world made under varied conditions have demonstrated the ruggedness and dependability of this pile.
- Number 8. Every pile in driving is tested to one and one-half times its rated load by the Engineering News Formula, universally accepted by engineers and proven trustworthy by experience. The shell left in the ground maintains the compression of the soil and assures you that the completed pile will safely bear its load.
- Number 9. By means of the reinforced shell piles can be driven in much closer centres than ordinarily possible (usually 2'6" centre to centre).
- Number 10. The licensee's organisation concentrate on the speed with which they get on the job, the efficient, speedy and harmonious conduct of the job and the rapidity with which they clean up and get out of the way so the general contract work can proceed.

"ITALIT"

IDEAL ROOFING FOR COLONY.

What is "Italit"? To Messrs. Shewan, Tomes and Co., the local agents, it is best known as "the Gold medal corrugated asbestos cement sheeting." To the thousands of users of "Italit" all over the world it is known as the ideal type of roofing for every climate. This is no exaggeration. Asbestos is rapidly gaining ground as the most reliable and most serviceable kind of roofing, and it will interest architects to know that a record is held for the number of contracts for "Italit" roofing. Amongst other contracts for the supply of "Italit" are the following:—

A. P. Co. Godowns.

The high standard quality of "Italit" is well known to the Home Office, War Office, the Admiralty, the India Office, the Crown Agents for the Colonies, and is universally acknowledged. It should be remembered that satisfactory roofing depends entirely upon the quality and suitability of the materials used and the standard of workmanship.

A-Test.

The following report from the Testing Works and Chemical Laboratories, Broadway House, Tothill Street, London, dated October 13, 1922, speaks for itself:—

"Eternit" Pietra Artificiale, Soc. Anon. Norfolk House, Laurence Pountney Hill, E.C.4.

Dear Sirs,

Tests of "Italit" Corrugated Asbestos Cement Sheets. In accordance with your instructions of the 5th instant I have tested the sheets of "Italit" Corrugated Asbestos Cement under concentrated and distributed loads with the following results:—

- Under Concentrated Load.
 - (1) At 45" centres, sheet supported on ordinary rafters 2" wide and the load applied centrally on a line 4" long through a wood block on the top of one of the ridges. Load at which failure occurred ... 425 lb.
 - (2) At 33-2/3" centres, loaded as above. Load at which failure occurred ... 625 lb.
 - (3) At 30" centres, loaded as above. Load at which failure occurred ... 676 lb.

Under Distributed Load.

- (4) At 30" centres, the sheet supported as before but the load applied centrally over an area of 18" x 26". Load at which failure occurred 2,550 lb. or 785 lb. per square foot.

The tests were carried out in a similar manner to those reported upon under date November 23, 1921.

Yours faithfully,

R. H. HARRY STANGER.

The sheets constitute an immense improvement on any previous corrugated asbestos-cement production for the following reasons:— "Italit" sheets are scientifically sound—having a 6-inch pitch and 1 1/4 inch depth of corrugation, which, moulded by an improved process with our newly invented machinery, enable them to offer fully double the resistance to transverse stress compared with the common types of corrugated asbestos sheets which have sharp and shallow

SANITARY FITTINGS.

FIRE PROTECTION.

BELL'S ASBESTOS
BLANKETS.

Keep Bell's Asbestos Fire Blankets ready to save from destruction home, shop, store, factory, garage, motor car, cinema, theatre, hospital, church, school, billiard saloon or Club premises.

Everybody dreads fire, and everybody should get protection against it. Many a fire which has gutted a home, destroyed a huge factory or institution, ruined a business, or fatal results, could have been prevented if proper means had been available when the fire broke out.

The Bell's Asbestos Fire Blanket will give your home, or property under your charge, that ever-ready protection. This blanket is thick asbestos cloth one yard square. It smother's a blaze instantly. If fire breaks out on a rug, chair, bed, table, switch-board or gas stove, or in a shop or factory; if a person or animal catches fire; if a motor car bursts into flame; then the Bell's Asbestos Blanket will smother the flames if they are not already too extensive.

The Bell's Asbestos Fire Blanket is ready for instant use, smothers the fire and extinguishes it instantly, does not deteriorate and will last for years, can be used again and again, cannot cause damage like water or chemicals, has no mechanism to be operated.

Bell's Asbestos Fire Blanket has been adopted by H. M. Government for the G.P.O. and the Royal Air Force, which is conclusive proof that it is efficient and meets the need for a safeguard always ready for instant use.

SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL THEATRE.

Under plans just announced by Professor George Baker, of Yale University, America is to take a million-dollar (£200,000) share in the international movement to rebuild and endow the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-upon-Avon. In all £500,000 will be raised, so it is stated, throughout the world, to complete the plans of the new theatre and its associated dramatic school, festival, company, museum, and library.

corrugations made by old methods. The depth of "Italit" corrugations is such as to run off rain-water much more readily than is possible with shallow sections.

"Italit" Corrugated Sheets are far more economical than corrugated galvanised iron and shallow corrugated asbestos being specially adapted for the roofing and walling of industrial buildings and others of large area, and of a permanent character, and, unlike metal sheets, they do not rust, nor crumble, being unaffected by fluctuations of temperature, moisture, sea, frost or acid fumes, and they prevent condensation.

BOOTE'S TILES.

QUALITY AND WEARING CAPACITY.

Tiles are used for many purposes. Not only do they enter into the construction of churches, public buildings, theatres, Clubs, and residences, but their sanitary advantages cannot be over-estimated. For walls and floors of buildings they are specially adaptable. For, say, a dark passage, a lining of white or light coloured tiles is particularly desirable, and the beauties and conveniences of a nicely tiled hall floor are well known. T. and R. Boote, Ltd., Burslem, England, for whom the sole agents in Hong Kong are Messrs. Shewan, Tomes & Co., make a speciality of ceramic mosaic pavements, and many large contracts at home and abroad can be quoted to show the great excellence in this line. Special designs or colourings can be supplied to suit any style of architecture.

Messrs. T. and R. Boote, Ltd., were awarded medals at the following exhibitions: London, 1883; London, 1882; Calcutta 1883; and Brussels, 1910.

It may be added that plain enamel tiles are now in great favour. Messrs. T. and R. Boote, Ltd., have gone to considerable expense and have procured the assistance of most of the cleverest pottery experts in bodies and glazes, in order to meet the demand for a good sound tile. Messrs. Shewan, Tomes & Co., have fulfilled contracts for tiles to the following:—

Y.M.C.A., Kowloon.
Peak Tramway.
Dairy Farm, Ice & Cold Storage Co., Ltd.
Hong Kong Tramways, Ltd.
Quarry Bay School.
Kowloon Bowling Club.
and many others.

Shewan, Tomes & Co. were the successful tenderers for the supply of tiles at the Peninsula Hotel, but owing to the building being placed at the disposal of the troops, work on this has been necessarily delayed.

TURFING.

THE BEST SEASON
NOW.

Messrs. Yeung Fat and Company, of 21, Whitfield, Causeway Bay, informed our representative that now is the best season to have TURFING done. No doubt many of our readers have private tennis courts which need attention and we thoroughly recommend them going to this expert in turfing, who only employs experienced and skilled artisans.

Yeung Fat undertakes the turfing of Tennis Courts, Lawns, Bowling Greens and Golf Greens and he informs us that his prices are very reasonable, so Secretary's of Clubs would do well to get in touch with this Contractor.

Turfing is only one of this firm's lines they being quite large Mechanical and Structural Contractors as well as being Stonemasonry specialists. Yeung Fat informed our representative that to deal with his Company was the "Sure way to Economy."

WING YICK & CO.

PROMINENT AMONG LOCAL CONTRACTORS.

Messrs. Wing Yick and Co., 25 Gage Street, occupy a prominent place amongst local building contractors. Amongst the buildings for which they have had the contract are Shek-O Club and bungalow, the Matilda Hospital, the Shamshuipo Police Station, Stephen's Building, the Asiatic Building, the "Morning Post" Building, and the pavilion and decorations on the occasion of the visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, which was completed in two months and a half.

This is a very good record, reflecting the utmost credit on the firm of Wing Yick and Co., who are also General Managers for the Sham Mow Sawmill Co., Limited, timber merchants, Hunghom.

A MARBLE DREAM.

THE BEAUTY AND PURITY OF THE TAJ MAHAL.

Agra is 843 miles by rail from Calcutta and 839 miles from Bombay. Shah Jahan was proclaimed Emperor at Agra in 1628. It is to his reign that most of the great architectural works in the Fort must be referred, though doubtless many of them had been commenced at an earlier date. The Moti Masjid, or "Pearl Mosque," the Jama Masjid, or "Great Mosque," and the Khas Mahal were all completed under this magnificent Emperor.

The Taj Mahal, generally accepted as the most exquisite piece of Mohammedan architecture in the world, commemorates his wife, Mumtaz Mahal. In 1658 Shah Jahan's third son, Aurangzeb, rebelled and deposed him, but the ex-Emperor was permitted to live in imperial state at Agra, though in confinement, until his death seven years later. British rule was set up in 1803, and remained undisturbed until the Mutiny in 1857. Since 1858 Agra has become for administrative purposes only, the headquarters of a division and a district.

But the ancient capital still maintains its natural supremacy as the finest city of Upper India, while the development of the railway system, of which it forms a great centre, is gradually restoring its commercial importance. The Taj Mahal, with its beautiful domes, "a dream in marble," rises on the river bank. It was created as a mausoleum for the remains of the wife of the Emperor Shah Jahan. She died in 1629, and the Taj, which was commenced soon after her death, was not completed until 1648. The materials are white marble from Makrana and red sandstone from Fatehpur-Sikri. The complexity of the design and the delicate intricacy of the workmanship baffle description.

Purity, Silence, and Calm. The mausoleum stands on a raised marble platform, and at each of the corners rises a tall and slender minaret of graceful proportions and exquisite beauty. In the centre of the whole design the mausoleum occupies a square of 186 feet. The main feature of this central pile is the great dome, which is about two-thirds of a sphere and tapers at its extremity into a pointed spire, crowned by a crescent. The internal decorations consist of inlaid work in precious stones, such as agate and jasper.

In regard to colour and design, the interior of the Taj may rank first in the world for purely decorative workmanship, while the perfect symmetry of its exterior, and the aerial grace of its domes, rising like marble bubbles into the clear sky, can never be forgotten. The lower walls and panels are covered with tulips, candelars, and full-blown lilies, in flat carving on white marble; and although the inlaid work of flowers, done in gems, is very brilliant when looked at closely, there is on the whole but little colour, and the all-prevailing sentiment is one of whiteness, silence, and calm.

ALL STEEL HOUSE.

FOR A SINKING GROUND.

Specialising in a particular design of all-steel house, William Beardmore and Co., Ltd., of Glasgow, have on hand an order which strikingly illustrates what can be done with this type of construction.

It is for a house to stand on ground subject to subsidence owing to shallow mine-workings beneath the surface. The ground in question is the only space available for this purpose, and the housing authority concerned looks upon it as certain that the level will alter after the house has been built.

The concrete pillars on which this steel house is normally mounted are being employed as usual, but interposed between them and the framework of the house is a sub-frame of steel girders. Should the ground carrying one or two of the pillars subside, in the first place the house is not entirely deprived of support on that spot; but what is more important, the whole structure may then be raised by means of jacks at that spot, so that the height of the pillar or pillars affected may be remade up to normal after which the house is again lowered on them.

STADIUM AT BLACKPOOL.

The Blackpool Corporation has granted to Mr. C. B. Cochran a site of 700 feet square on which to erect a stadium capable of accommodating 100,000 people on the new promenade at South Shore.

LOVELY HOMES.

SOME RELICS OF 300 YEARS.

Many writers have noticed and commented on the fact that there is in no other language a word which means exactly what our word "home" means. The other languages have words which express a part, and sometimes a great part, of the meaning of our word, but there is always something lacking. And although one would hardly care to assert that the thing for which the word stands is the exclusive copyright of the British race, the fact remains that our nation has always cherished its homes with a peculiar tenderness, has made of them dear, intimate, and individual things, has sought to express itself and its secret dreams and happinesses in them to an extent no other nation with which I am acquainted can match, (says a writer in the "Daily Mail.")

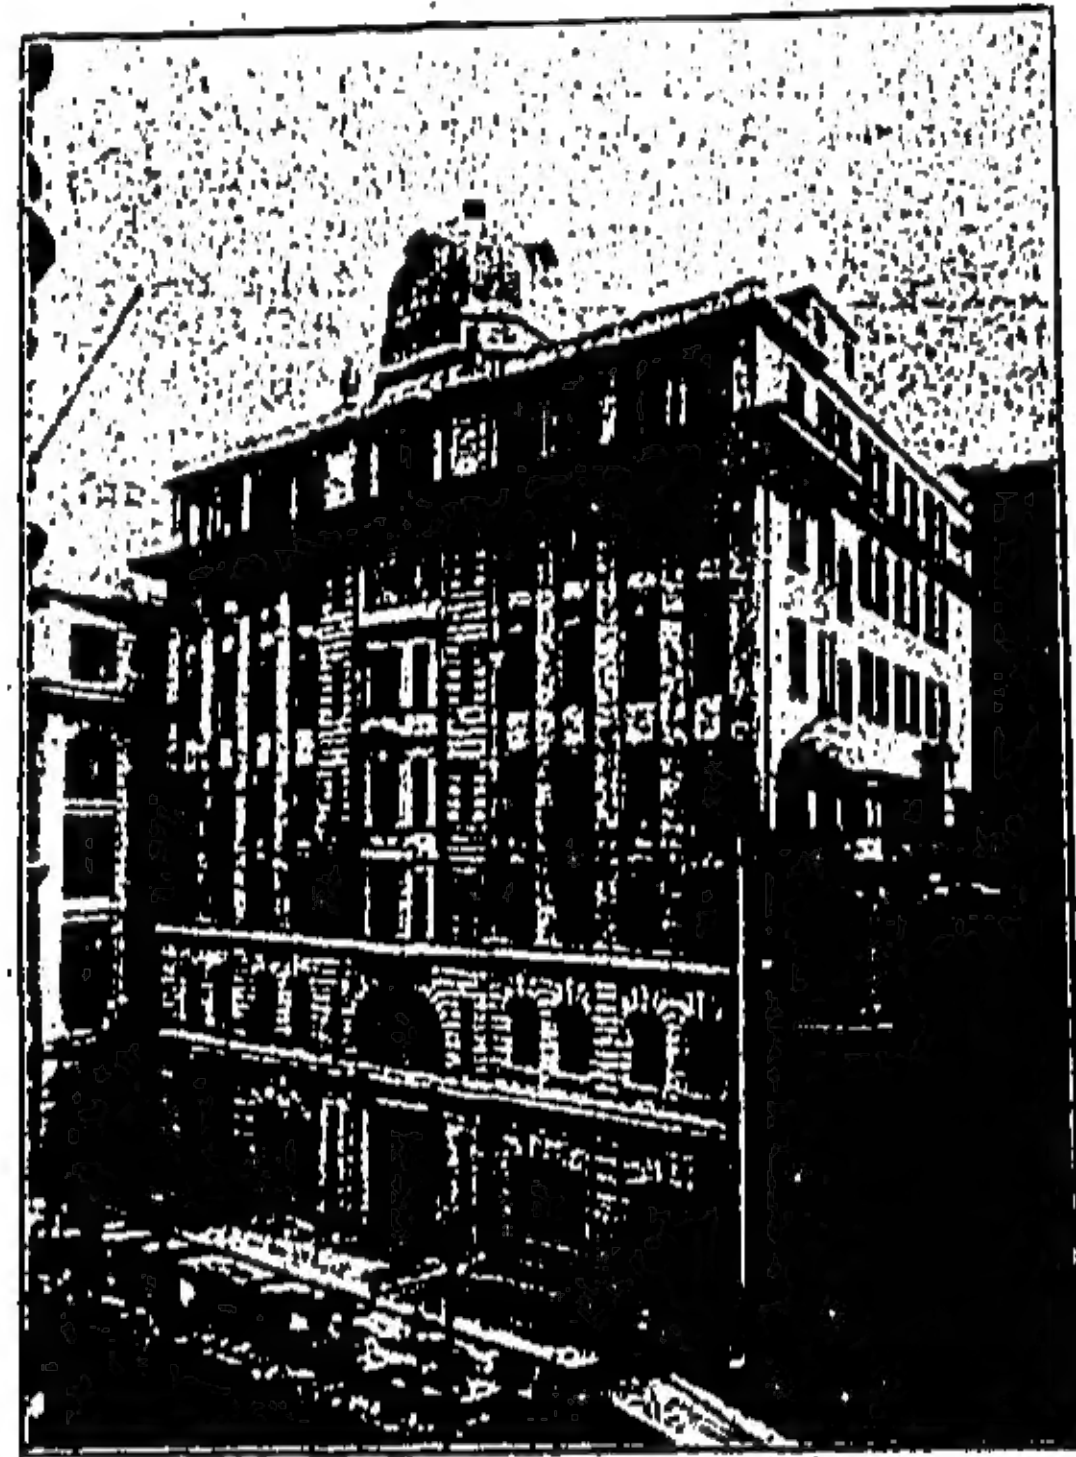

It is fitting, then, that there should be among the treasures of our infinitely varied London a place designed to make manifest and to praise the loveliness of the English home. That place exists, as so many of London's jewels exist, in a district where no uninstructed person would dream of looking for it. North from Shoreditch Church, which, in its turn, lies north of Liverpool Street Station, runs Kingsland can find. Consequently they have contrived to have all their rooms panelled with the beautiful work in yellow pine with which the eighteenth century—criticising in advance our modern love of passionate wall-paper—covered the walls of its homes. They have rescued also fine staircases, stray bits of iron railings, sections of moulding from ceilings, and, in one case, an entire room of an eighteenth-century cottage which would be enough to make even a Communist cobbler sit down and thank God for the British Constitution and the long traditions of our land.

Hints for Cabinet-Makers.

In so far as they make any visitor aware of and cause him to desire loveliness, all museums may, I suppose, be described as useful. But the Geffrye Museum—to which all are admitted without charge—has a more immediate usefulness. It stands in a district which is almost entirely inhabited by cabinet-makers, and it was cheering to learn, as I did from Mr. Hawkins, the curator, that the workers of the neighbourhood go there over and over again to look at all those splendid things, at those chairs and tables and bureaux and bookcases and bedsteads to gain from them some guidance, some inspiration for their own work.

It filled one with a hope for the future of furniture in England—and, seeing that so great a proportion of one's life is spent in intimate association with

Road. A little way up the road, on the right, there are gracious and homely buildings of mellow brickwork enclosing a space where tall trees reign. These are the Geffrye Almshouses established in the eighteenth century by Richard Geffrye, knight and alderman of the City, and in a part of the buildings the London County Council has found a home for what is inadequately described as a furniture museum. The explorer passes through dingy and dejected thoroughfares to a habitation of loveliness.

Relics of 300 Years.

This is a place where wise lovers of London and of England have brought together a multitude of the things which make London not worshipping or marvellous or tremendous—but merely lovable. It is not concerned with celebrating any meretricious splendours of pomp and massive dignity. Proud London, which has been the chief market of the world, is not considered or remembered within these walls. The only concern is to display those things which Londoners have made during the past 300 years to honour and make beautiful their dwellings.

So there are, gathered here, all sorts of intimate, friendly things. You may find, for instance, in the first room you enter, a collection of those charmingly fantastic knockers which the people of the seventeenth century were accustomed to place on bedroom doors, together with a variety of those cheery conceits in wrought iron which they placed on the entrances to their homes to welcome the visitor who came to hammer on the door. Beyond these you pass to a long series of illustrations of household interiors as they were before furniture was made in bulk by machinery.

The people who work for the Geffrye Museum are very wise and watchful. They know when any venerable London house is about to be pulled down, and they go immediately to see what they furniture, it does not seem out of place to hope, or even to pray, for better furniture than so much of the rubbish which, shaming all our great tradition, is turned out of the factories to-day.

FORTHCOMING CANADIAN CONSTRUCTION.

Construction contracts awarded in all the cities, towns, villages and rural districts throughout Canada during February, according to figures compiled by MacLean Building Reports, Ltd., totalled 19,516,700 dollars ($3,908,000), compared with 16,771,800 dollars ($3,354,000) in January and 13,477,600 dollars ($2,695,000) in February, 1926. The total for the first two months of 1927, 36,283,500 dollars ($7,257,000), is an increase of 38.8 per cent. over the awards for the same period of 1926. This large increase so early in the year is attributable not only to the very favourable winter building season in some portions of the country, but also to the better tone for general business throughout the year. Contemplated new work, for which plans are being prepared has been reported in exceptionally large volume since the beginning of the year, the total for the year to date being 159,314,000 dollars ($31,862,000). This is more than double the total for the first two months of 1926, and is indicative of a construction year well above the average.

KWONG LOONG.

This firm has been established for over twenty years, and has executed some very important contracts. They were the building contractors for those houses situated at 88 to 132 Des Voeux Road, besides many others. The architects are Messrs. Hewitt and Shu. Inquiries are invited from those intending to build or renovate property anywhere in the Colony. Their address is 3 Gage Street (telephone C. 3806).

SPECIALISTS IN REINFORCED CONCRETE.

Considering the number and importance of reinforced concrete structures now existing in the Colony it is amazing to reflect that these represent the development of less than ten years.

It was only in the year 1918 that the first reinforced concrete building of any importance was commenced. This was the large Godown of the Hong Kong & Kowloon Wharf & Godown Co., Ltd. Shortly afterwards (in 1920) was begun the Stephen's Building (until a few months ago the Headquarters of the Fire Brigade) which was the first building on reinforced concrete piles, and is admittedly one of the most economically designed and constructed office blocks in the Colony.

Although the principles and practice of reinforced concrete construction have been steadily gaining ground elsewhere for the past twenty-five years, the Civil Engineers responsible for the design and construction in Hong Kong of these first reinforced concrete structures, had to overcome a considerable amount of prejudice against the so-called "new fangled" ideas as well as indifference and apathy in various quarters from which every encouragement should have been forthcoming.

The advantages of reinforced concrete construction over steel frame construction may briefly be summarised as follows:—

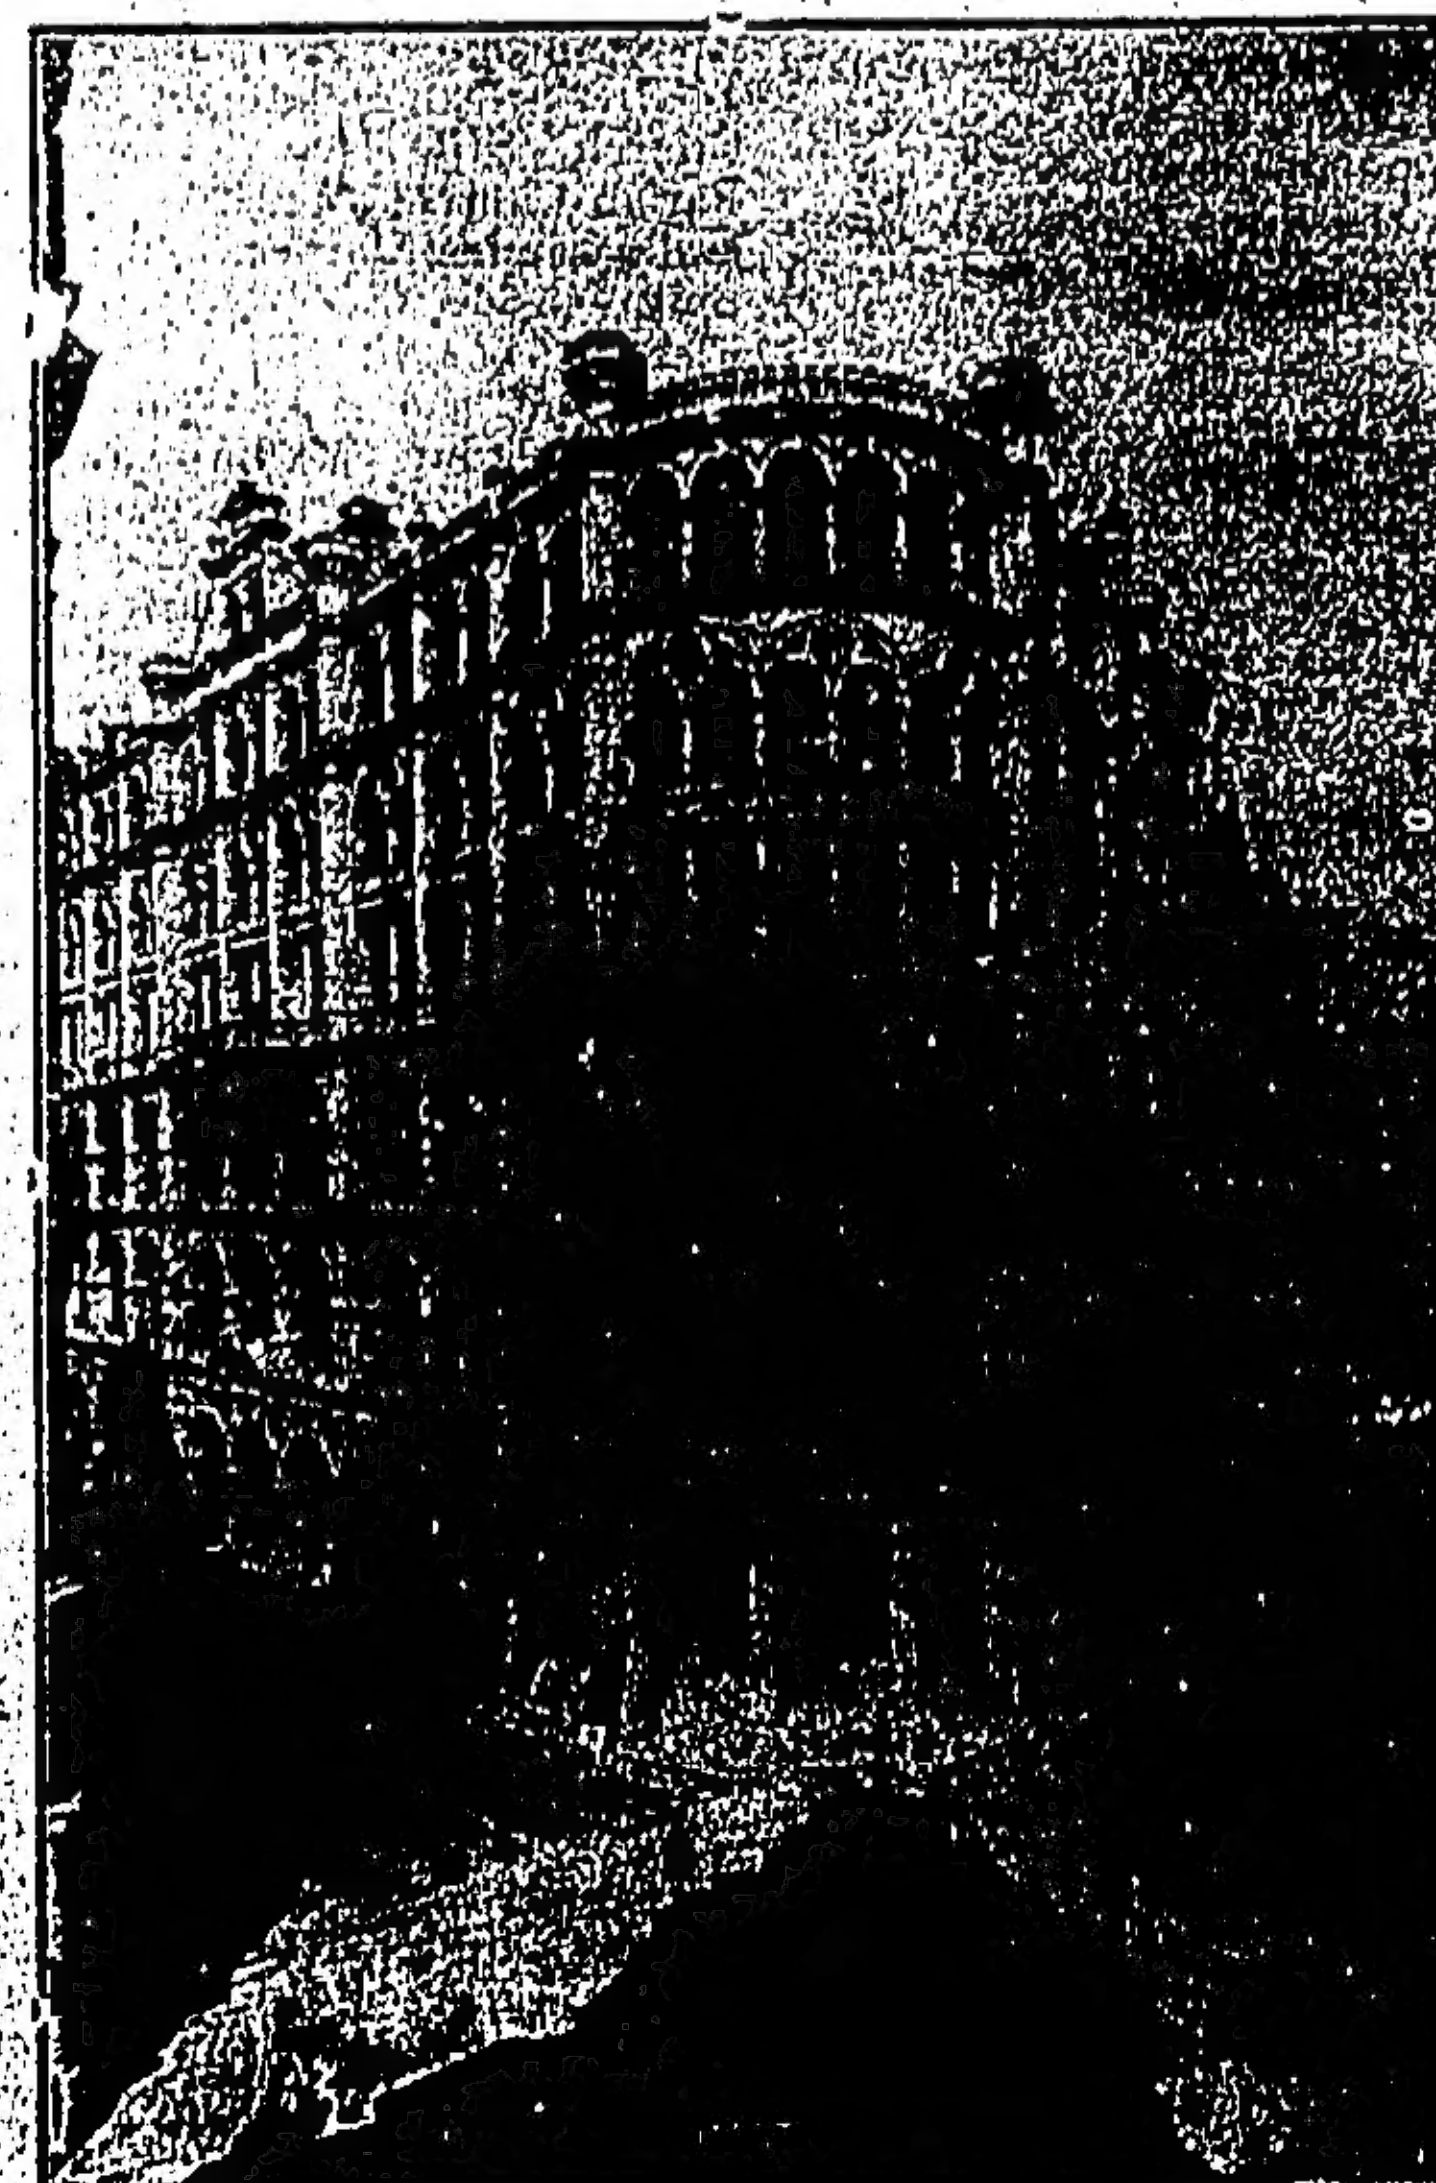

- (a) A reinforced concrete structure is not only monolithic but possesses elastic properties which enable it to withstand earth tremors or other disturbances.
- (b) It is permanent, fireproof and weatherproof. (Intense heat tests carried out in the United States sometime ago recorded a resistance of eight hours for reinforced concrete columns as against only eleven to twenty-one minutes for steel columns under the same conditions).
- (c) The materials for concrete (cement, sand and broken stone) are all obtainable in the Colony, and stocks of steel bars for reinforcement being generally ample, work can be commenced without delay, but in the case of a steel frame building there is usually a waiting period of several months until the arrival of the steelwork from Europe or America.

It is not generally known that the Specialist Engineers on the staff of the Hong Kong Engineering & Construction Co., Ltd., (Mr. L. Gain, Civil Engineer, Ecole des Travaux Publics de Paris, and his assistants) can justly claim to be amongst the earliest pioneers of reinforced concrete construction in Hong Kong and South China.

In addition to the buildings already mentioned as having been erected from 1918 to 1920, Mr. Gain and his assistants have designed and carried out the following important works some entirely and others under the supervision of local firms of Architects:—

From 1921 to 1926.

The modern Ice Factory & Cold Storage Bldg. at East Point of the Dairy Farm Company. The new offices of the "South China Morning Post" (reinforced concrete structure). The Rutten Building, Duddell Street (reinforced concrete structure).

Peninsula Hotel Foundations, etc.

Exchange Building (Foundations and structure).

The Lee Theatre, Wanchai, with all its overhanging balconies, heavy trusses over the stage and dome (80 ft. wide) over the auditorium.

The China Provident 5-storey Godown at West Point, including foundations on Franki Piles, (built in 10 months actual working time.)

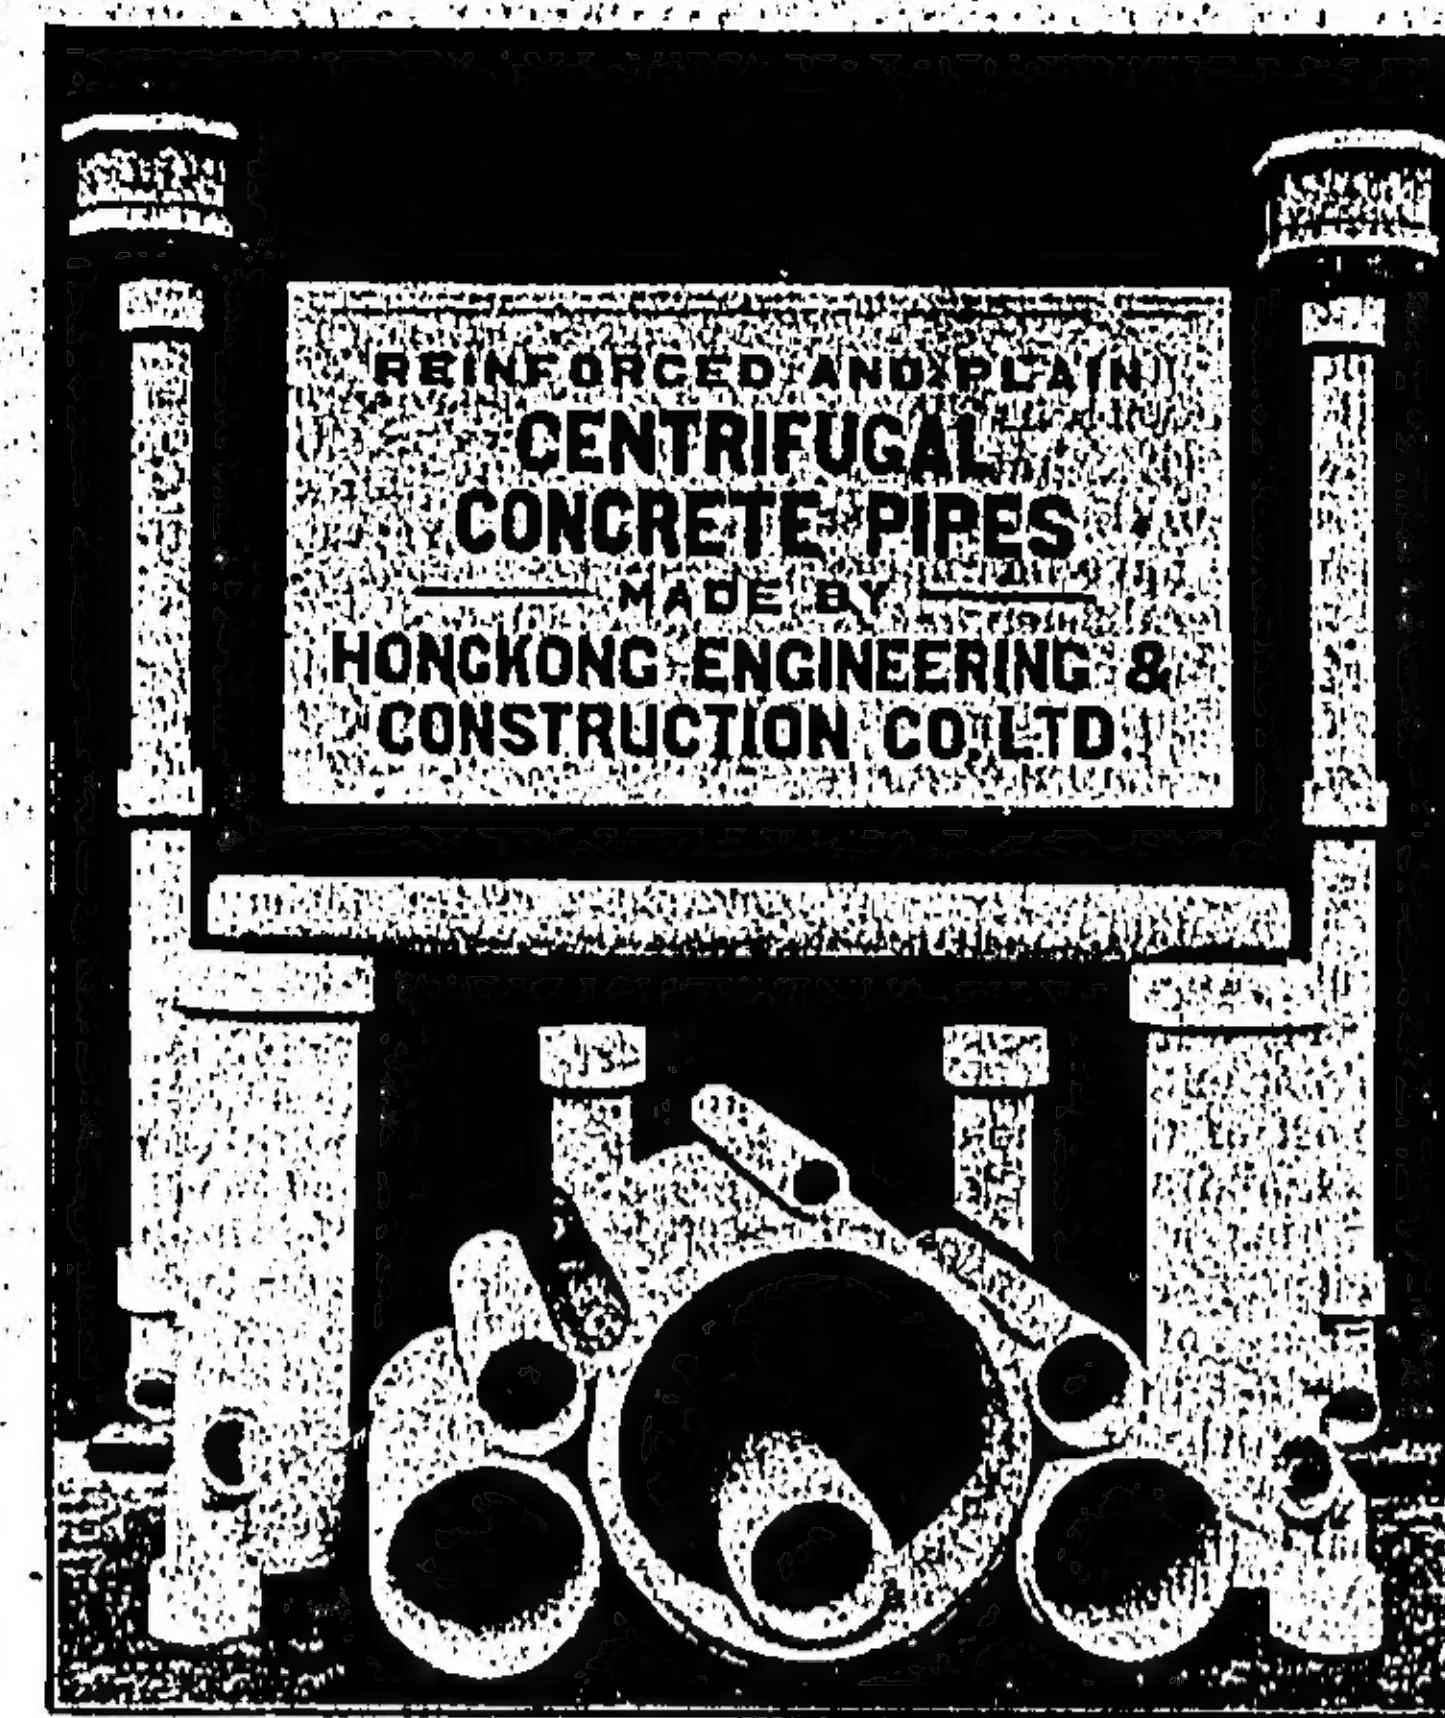

The Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Co., Ltd., (the original "Construction Company") is also the pioneer of cast-in-site foundation piling in this district, having in 1923 introduced the now well-known "Franki Patent Compressed Concrete Piling System" which was adopted after exhaustive tests for the foundations of the Peninsula Hotel.

Since then many foundation contracts have been carried out by this firm with unvarying success. They have recently completed in less than three months and in spite of the disturbances in Shanghai the foundations of what is to be Shanghai's tallest structure, the Arnhold Apartment Building of thirteen storeys on a site in the French Concession.

This Company has also rendered a service to the Colony by introducing, last year, concrete drain pipes, culverts, etc. made by centrifugal process. As evidence of the extent to which these pipes have been taken up in other countries it may be mentioned that in Australia one order alone was placed for 210 miles of 4" diameter pipes!

Founded in 1922 the Hong Kong Engineering & Construction Co., Ltd., has, up to the present, had a somewhat peculiar history. One side of its business, i.e. that of reinforced concrete foundations and structures, has been consistently successful, but, embarking on certain road making and other works for the Government, the Company sustained severe losses from which it is only just beginning to recover.

In view of the possibility of more settled conditions in the near future it is to be hoped that this progressive Company, with its efficient organisation and modern methods, will again take a prominent part in the building operations of the Colony and South China generally.

Even without the special coating as above described, our pipes are guaranteed to be absolutely impervious for all practical purposes, but in order to "make assurance doubly sure" we propose to adopt the above as our standard product without any increase in price.

There may be, however, clients who will prefer to continue using the untreated pipes, (of which we have supplied many thousands without a single complaint), in which case we shall be happy to meet their wishes.

As you are no doubt aware, centrifugal concrete pipes can be made with steel wire reinforcement to any required resistance, and we would particularly draw your attention to the economical advantages offered by the use of our larger diameter pipes (up to 39 inches) for storm-water and general drainage work.

Extremely strong, yet light and easy to handle, they render possible the construction of sewers and culverts by means of pre-cast elements of uniform dimensions and homogeneous composition which will answer to the highest conditions of quality and resistance at a cost below anything obtainable by other methods.

We carry stocks of all usual diameters from 3 inches to 24 inches, in standard lengths of 3'3". Special sizes and diameters up to 39 inches can be made at short notice.

We are, Gentlemen,
Yours faithfully,
(Signed) L. GAIN

CIVIC UNTIDINESS.

A "SLOPPINESS" IN DETAIL.

Yet another matter, which would seem to be with us always—our inveterate civic untidiness. We do not refer to the scavenger—but to that general "sloppiness" in civic detail, to which we never cease to call attention, and against which we shall never tire of protesting. We have had, and we welcome, the warm support of countless individuals in the architectural profession in our campaign, but we must confess that we are not entirely conscious of the support of the whole body of architects, and we are inclined to doubt if this matter is being taken sufficiently seriously.

Whole areas of London are being demolished, to remain in desolation for months at a time, and sometimes for years, with no effort to make the interim at all sightworthy. The romantic groups of scaffolding and derricks which mark some new building effort are defied by the irrelevant bill-poster, and long ungainly arms stretch over the village pavement from petrol pump to curb at every few yards. These are but a few of the signs of an untidiness which is as much mental as physical. How very much nearer we should be to civic order if every architect felt that his profession called upon him to make his protest against these things, and if every public body was aware that an entire learned profession rebuked them when they ignored the deficiencies.

We appeal to the whole body of architects to consider the many ways in which a united profession can act for its own good and for that of the country at large. It is a big matter to consider in every way, but all the more worthy of serious thought (says "The Builder.")

RURAL BEAUTY.

PREVENTING DISFIGUREMENT OF BUILDINGS.

A circular has been sent to local authorities by the British Ministry of Health with regard to the preservation of the beauty of the English countryside, and the operation of the Housing (Rural Workers) Act, 1926. It states that the Minister relies on local authorities to make such suitable arrangements in carrying out schemes under the Act as will prevent the disfigurement of buildings and will secure that so far as possible the special character, beauty, and fitness of these buildings for their surroundings will be maintained.

It will be realised (says the London "Daily Mail") that the beauty of the English countryside depends very largely on the general appropriateness of local materials and character of building generally found in the older buildings. The types of cottage vary very much in different localities, and go far to give a special character to each district. Consequently, the preservation or destruction of the amenity of the countryside depends not merely on the smaller number of cottages which have an exceptionally high degree of architectural merit or special antiquarian interest but on the larger number of country cottages of the average local type.

BRICKLAYING RECORD.

William Mignes, of Wiskersley, near Rotherham, a foreman bricklayer, employed by a Sheffield firm, has established a world record, it is stated, by laying 1,121 bricks in an hour. The previous record was 879 laid by John Wood, of Scarborough. The bricks used by Mignes were old, and were a pound heavier and a quarter of an inch thicker than the ordinary new bricks. He kept six labourers working at top speed.

MEDIEVAL CASTLE.

MODERN HOUSE FOR A MILLIONAIRE.

American money is going to convert the fairytale medieval Leeds Castle, known as the Enchanted Castle of Kent, into one of the most modern residences of England. Orders have been given by the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Filmer, for the installation of steam heat, a hot water system, an electric light plant and 15 bathrooms, which will introduce a strangely luxurious note into the romantic atmosphere of the ancient walls and keeps.

There is also to be a new grand staircase, and the living and entertaining rooms are to be restored, in keeping with the architecture. All of that will cost somewhere near $500,000. The castle itself, with its 3,100 acres of land, was bought for $1,000,000. The new chateau, a daughter of Lord Queensborough, is a granddaughter of the late William C. Whitney of New York.

Leeds Castle for years has been the envy of Americans who motor from Dover to London, for it is visible from the Maidstone Road. It is so picturesque that it seems unreal, coming upon the beholder like a vision from the age of fabled romance.

It is built on two islands in the centre of a wide sheet of water. Originally it was a Saxon stronghold, and is believed to date from the ninth century, though portions of its buildings date from the thirteenth and later centuries. The buildings and the mainland are linked up by three bridges, each with a gateway and portcullis. These are to be preserved.

The history of the castle would fill volumes. In the eleventh century Edward I lived in it. Queen Isabella tried to enter it by force, and the bodies of her supporters who fell in that affair were found four years ago. Queen Philippa of Hainaut and Queen Anne of Bohemia lived there and so did—in 1416—Emperor Sigmund, the "witch-queen" Joan of Navarre, and Anne Boleyn.

Later on, Queen Elizabeth, Charles II and more recently George III, all figured in its history. In the room of Queen Elizabeth the bed in which she slept has been preserved.

In the entrance tower of the castle is an old bell with St. George and the dragon emblazoned upon it. This bell is still used to toll the curfew in the village of Leeds—a custom which has been observed for centuries. One of the most interesting details is the barbacan, including a mill 650 years old.

SUNLIGHT.

THE HIGH COST OF GLASS.

The importance of sunlight, and more especially of the admission of ultra-violet rays through our windows and smoke fogs, is daily being insisted upon. The trouble at present is that the cost of glass that permits the passage of these rays is inordinately high and beyond the reach of the ordinary man, who has to pay more for his house already than he can afford. We hope that no effort will be spared in the attempt to reduce the cost of such glass as, under present conditions it is impossible to look for its general use in home, school, and factory. There appears to be little doubt (says a Home paper of April 22) that, with the elimination of smoke, fog, and the common glass that intercepts ultra-violet light, we should enormously improve the public health and resistance to disease.

BIRMINGHAM EXTENSIONS.

The Birmingham City Council has sanctioned the erection of a new central fire station on an island site at the junction of New Corporation Street and Aston Street, the cost of which, inclusive of demolishing the present buildings on the site, re-housing tenants and providing fresh offices for the Corporation Weights and Measures Department, will not exceed £200,000.

EXCHANGE BUILDING.

PREMISES WORTHY OF THE COLONY.

Of pleasing modern design, and incorporating all that is latest in the building art, "Exchange Building" is continually admired by strangers to the Colony. As local residents, of course, know, it is the home of the Stock Exchange, Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Ltd., the offices of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Hotels, Ltd., and the Hong Kong Realty and Trust Company, Ltd., as well as affording office accommodation to professional men.

The building is six storeys high, with a basement and mezzanine floor. It has been constructed of reinforced concrete, the contract for the frame having been secured by the Hong Kong Engineering and Construction Company. In the basement first, the front portion is occupied by the Hong Kong Stock Exchange. This part of the basement is entered through the centre hall, which is an imposing affair in two shades of marble. The whole of the Stock Exchange has walls panelled in white Italian marble. The remaining portion of the basement is occupied by Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Ltd., for cold storage, groceries, ship chandlery, etc. The heating boilers are also installed in the basement.

The ground floor is occupied entirely by Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Ltd., as are also the mezzanine and first floors. A feature of the main windows is that they are of the island type, thus giving more window display than is to be found in any other building in Hong Kong.

They are modern in every respect, with bronze frames round the large plate glass windows. Although the frontage of the building is 92 feet, the actual running feet of display window is over 200 feet.

The mezzanine floor can be entered either from the central office entrance by a marble stairway or by two modern lifts which run from the ground floor to the top of the building.

On the second floor are located the offices of the Managing Director of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Hotels, Ltd., together with office accommodation for the Secretary and Head Office staff. The Hong Kong Realty and Trust Company, Ltd., who were the architects as well as the owners of the building, also have their offices on this floor.

The three top floors have been designed in suites of offices, each complete with lavatories, etc., specially suitable for the use of professional men, such as doctors, dentists, lawyers, etc. The suites have been so arranged that they can be large or small to suit requirements.

That peculiar to Torphichen being the upper chambers, four in number, reached by a wheel stair. These buildings probably date from the beginning of the fifteenth century, but a small fragment is of the twelfth century.

ANCIENT CHURCH.

DATES FROM FIFTEENTH CENTURY.

The Scottish Ecclesiastical Society on April 23 visited Torphichen Church.

Mr. Thomas Ross gave a short description of the buildings. The church of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, he said, has been a building of considerable importance. The first idea of the visitor on approaching it is that it is an old baronial keep, with wide chimneys on the gables, and its weather-worn battlements and roofs still intact. The site of the surrounding churchyard, with its many quaint windows, traceried windows, and the Parish Church with its belfry, soon reveal the true character of the building, which shows the remains of a large Cross church, of which the north and south transepts and crossing, with the lofty central tower covered with a saddle-backed roof, still remain in a state of fair preservation. The Parish Church occupies the site of the ancient nave. Of the choir, part of the north wall remains, along with the east gable. The whole length of the fabric has been about 155 feet from east to west, the transepts being about 70 feet from north to south. In the centre compartment are finely moulded piers and arches for supporting the tower, rising to a height of about 30 feet; the tower itself being about 70 feet high, with the usual round aperture in the centre so invariably found in the vaults of all Scottish towers. The various features were fully described.

MODERN HOMES.

HANDSOME AUSTRALIAN RESIDENCE.

The "West Australian" (Perth) publishes a sketch of one of the better-class modern residences that have been erected in various parts of the city and suburbs. This one has just been completed at a cost of £2,800 for Mr. L. Butler, headmaster of the North Perth State School, to the design of Mr. R. Sparney, and is situated at the corner of Quarry Road and Wingfield Avenue, off Mount's Bay Road, at Crawley. Overlooking the river at a high elevation, it is well set back from the street, and is lightly screened by small trees in a picturesquely terraced garden. The main entrance is from Wingfield Avenue through an interesting double arched porch, the floor of which is mosaic. This gives access to a large hall, leading to a passage, from which entrance may be obtained to all rooms without going through any other room. Another interesting feature is a massively colonnaded piazza facing the river. The house, which has a tiled roof, contains seven large rooms, comprising three bedrooms, a living room, dining room, kitchen, maid's room, and a sleeping-out apartment on the second floor, which is reached by a wide stairway.

From the woman's point of view, perhaps the kitchen and the bathroom are best. The kitchen walls are tiled to a height of 7ft., and bordered with coloured tiles. Abundant cabinets are provided for kitchen utensils, and all are enclosed in cupboards. A cooler,

BUILT BY WREN.

CITY LIVERY CLUB'S NEW HOME.

The City Livery Club, whose members are drawn exclusively from the ancient City of London Guilds, has acquired the lease of part of the Chapter House of St. Paul's Cathedral. The house was built by Wren about 1712, at a cost of £5,000; to-day the building and site are estimated to be worth twenty times that amount. Formerly the clergy summoned to Convocation met and robed in the house and went across in procession to the Cathedral to attend a service in Latin before proceeding to Westminster. The building, says the "Times," has dignity and simplicity. The ground floor has a large square panelled entrance hall, paved with plain white marble slabs. There are deep-set doors and windows in the thickness of its walls. A fine old table in the hall is as old as the house and is reputed to have been constructed from timber saved from old St. Paul's after the Great Fire. On the right of the hall is the apartment now used by the bank. A wide shallow staircase has beautiful wrought-iron supports to the handrails. The chapter room is on the first floor, looking out to the Cathedral, and is remarkable for its dark old wainscotted and panelled walls. On the second floor is a spacious room with white panelled walls and deep windows, and a series of smaller rooms all possessing the panelling and features of the Queen Anne period. In 1865 extensive alterations were made to adapt the house as a residence for the Archbishop of London, and from that date until 1920 it was in the occupation of successive holders of that office.

ROYAL CHAPEL AT WINDSOR.

Lieut.-Commander Kenworthy asked the First Commissioner of Works in the House of Commons on April 20 if he would state who was responsible for the heraldic advice given when the Royal Chapel at Windsor was restored; if he was aware that the yale which figured in the heraldic decorations was now represented with both its horns sloping the same way, whereas the ancient design was for one horn to point forward and one horn to point backwards; and whether, in the interests of heraldic accuracy, he would take further advice with a view to the necessary alterations being made.

Captain King, who replied, said that the Chapel was under the jurisdiction of the Dean of Windsor, and the First Commissioner was, therefore, unable to take any action in the matter.

HOUSES FOR DISABLED MEN.

The British Legion are about to start upon a scheme for erecting houses in various parts of England and Wales to be occupied by disabled and ex-Service men. Already a substantial sum of money has been allotted for this purpose. The country has been divided into 11 areas for administration, and the houses will be erected in groups according to local needs. The whole of the organisation of the scheme is being carried out by the headquarters of the British Legion, and the architects are Messrs. Thomas & Wood, who were formerly Housing Commissioners of the Ministry of Health. Sites are now being acquired, according to the "Times," and a start will be made as soon as possible. It is hoped that a number of houses will be completed and let at a very low rent before October 1, and the remainder will be erected without delay after that date.

REMAINS OF EARLY LONDON.

The committee in charge of the Museum of the Corporation of London (Guildhall Museum) have recently started a scheme for the effective survey of the ancient site as they are revealed by modern building operations. The Councils of the Society of Antiquaries and the Royal Institute of British Architects, together with the authorities of the British Museum and the London Museum, have all readily given their support to the project, and already the work is taking definite shape. Briefly the scheme is to record on a large-scale map of the City of London the details and measurements of all authenticated discoveries as they occur before the requirements of modern building improvements obliterate these relics of the past. It is hoped, too, that in time it will be possible to transfer to this plan the vast amount of valuable information on this subject scattered (and often forgotten) in the various archaeological publications of the last fifty years. The plan will become in time the most valuable storehouse for knowledge of the site of Roman London.

SIR T. DUNCAN RHIND.

DEATH OF A FORMER ARCHITECT.

The death occurred at Brighton on April 24 of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Thomas Duncan Rhind, A.R.I.B.A., who was for many years an architect in Edinburgh. He had been ill for some time. A son of the late Mr. John Rhind, A.R.S.A., sculptor, he was born at Edinburgh in 1871. He served his apprenticeship as an architect in the office of the late Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc, R.S.A., and was afterwards for a time in a London office. On returning to Edinburgh he became a partner of the firm of Messrs. Paterson and Rhind, and after the death of Mr. Paterson he carried on business on his own account. He exhibited architectural work at the Mound for several years. In the competition for the last International Exhibition buildings in Edinburgh his design was placed second. One of his chief domestic works is the boldly designed Ivanhoe Hotel, Bloomsbury Street, London. He was also an etcher of repute, and in an emergency took charge for a session of the etching class at the Edinburgh College of Art.

INQUIRY INTO BUILDING ACTS.

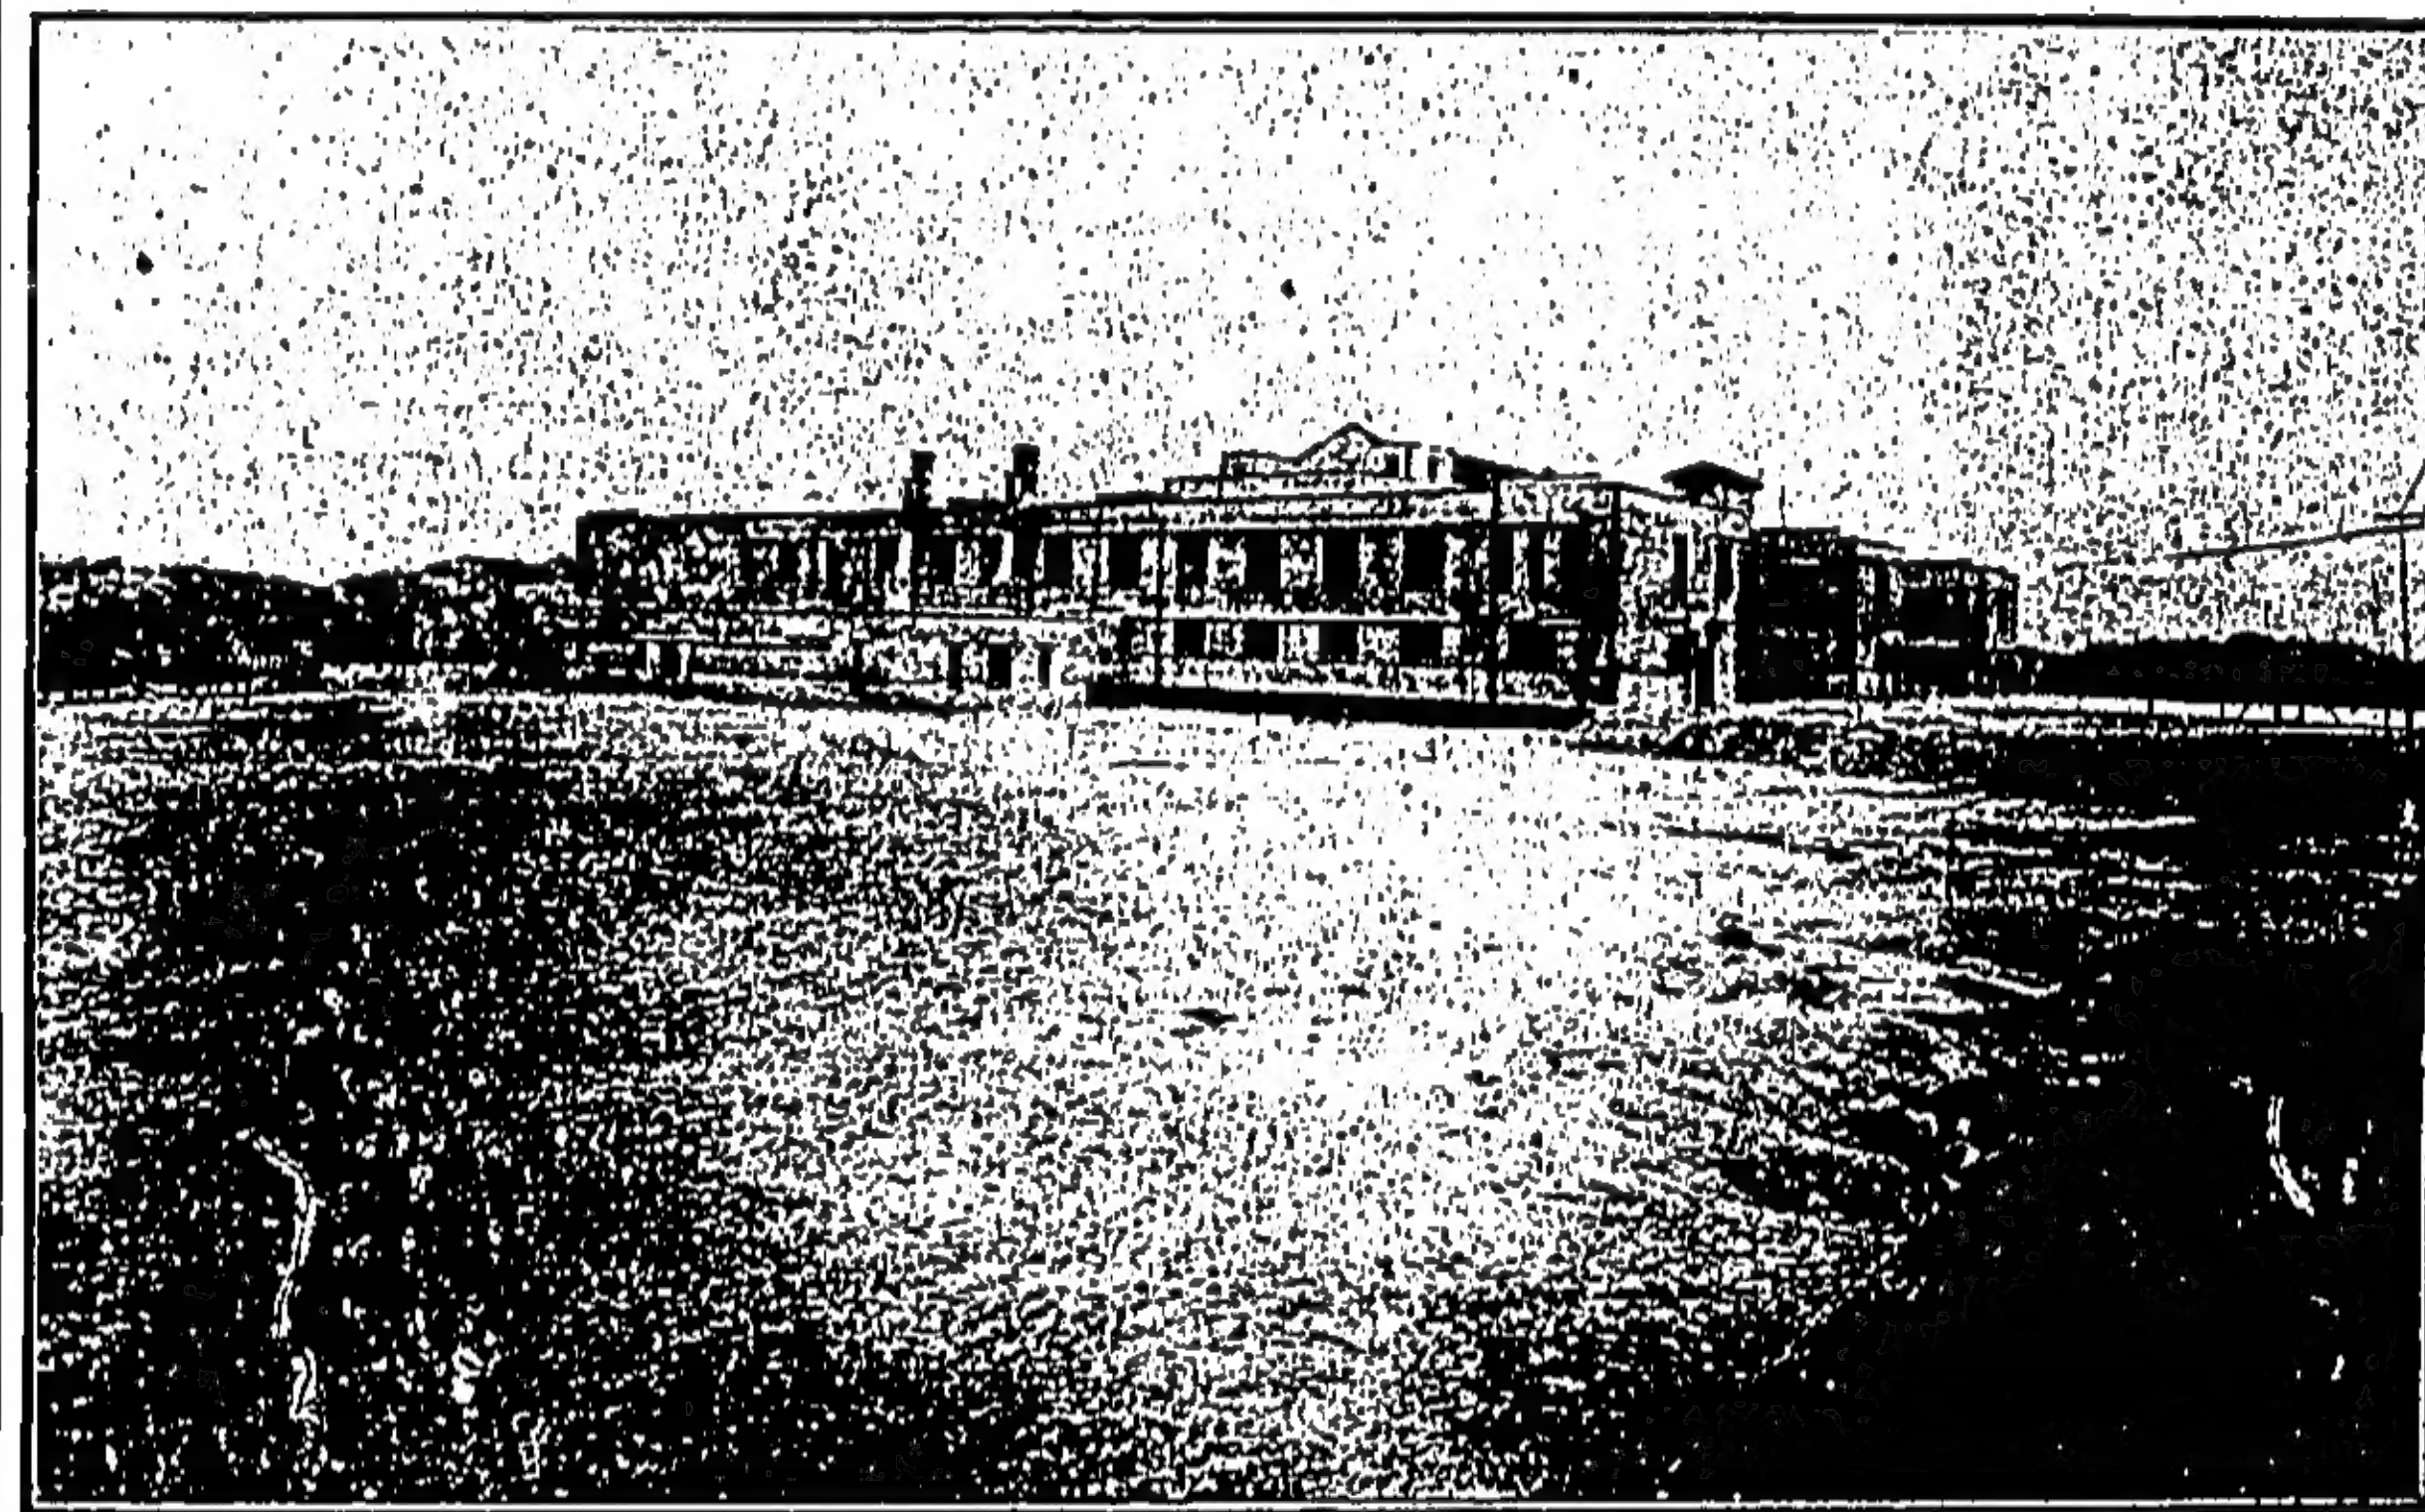

The London County Council at a recent meeting dealt in detail with certain estimates which had already been approved in bulk. The principal capital requirements submitted had reference to improvements, main drainage, and mental hospitals. The estimate of the Improvements Committee (£1,050,000) included £100,000 for the reconstruction of Waterloo Bridge and £100,000 for Lambeth Bridge. Mr. E. G. Culpin moved an amendment asking the Council to vote £100 for an inquiry into the London Building Acts and the position of district surveyors. He said the consolidation of the London Building Acts was necessary. It was difficult for builders and architects to find what was expected of them, while the Building Acts Committee itself found questions which were raised very difficult to decide. The office of district surveyor was an anachronism. It was paid by fees, and in one case a district surveyor over a term of years obtained an average yearly income of over £5,000. District surveyors should be under control of the Council, and should be paid salaries. Mr. W. Ray, while expressing sympathy with the objects of the amendment, said the time was not opportune for such an inquiry. The Council rejected the amendment. Mr. C. A. G. Manning asked for an allocation of £500 for the promotion of legislation to prevent the London squares from being built upon. He said successive Councils had been deeply interested in the matter, and an Act was secured which protected many squares. That Act did not go far enough. The time had now come when all the squares should be protected.

Mr. Ray replied that a resolution would be placed on the next agenda of the Council asking the Government to set up an inquiry in order to secure that information not in the possession of the Council should be obtained.

Mr. Herbert Morrison said the Council had already spent three years on inquiry, and the fact was well known. Mr. John Scurr had drafted a Bill, which provided that the squares should not be built upon.

Mr. Manning declined to withdraw the amendment, which was lost on a division.

Sir Percy Simmons informed Mr. J. D. Gilbert that tenders in connection with the works on the Lambeth Bridge approach had been invited, and were due. He also said that two blocks of land, having an area of about 79,000 ft., at Kingsway and Aldwych, had been available for building for about 20 years. The Council's yearly rent roll from sites already let on the area of the improvement was about £105,000. Arrangements for letting a site for offices for the Indian Government, had been completed, and the Committee had other negotiations in hand.

BUILT IN 1432.

A DISCOVERY AT COBHAM.

An interesting discovery, says the "Morning Post," has been made by Major Benton Fletcher, of World's End, Cobham, at the Cedar House, close by the Old Mill at Cobham. This is a fifteenth-century hall, dated A.D. 1432, the same date as that of Church Stile House, near the Parish Church. Until recently it had a kitchen, larder, and pantry built inside it. When Major Fletcher bought the premises a brick wall ran across the centre of the hall, but this has now been taken down. The oak ceiling and original beams are still there, whilst across the roof are curved oak collars. There is also a beam of 20 feet, all one piece, across the tie. In another room is an old kitchen with an ancient open fireplace, across which is a spit and an ancient open fireplace, across which is a spit and an 8 feet wide chimney breast. The house is shaped like the letter H, with two wings, one of which is a new one, and built as nearly as possible on the old foundations. Outside is a real Gothic doorway, and the entrance gate from the roadway was taken from a house in Kent belonging to Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the famous author and dramatist.

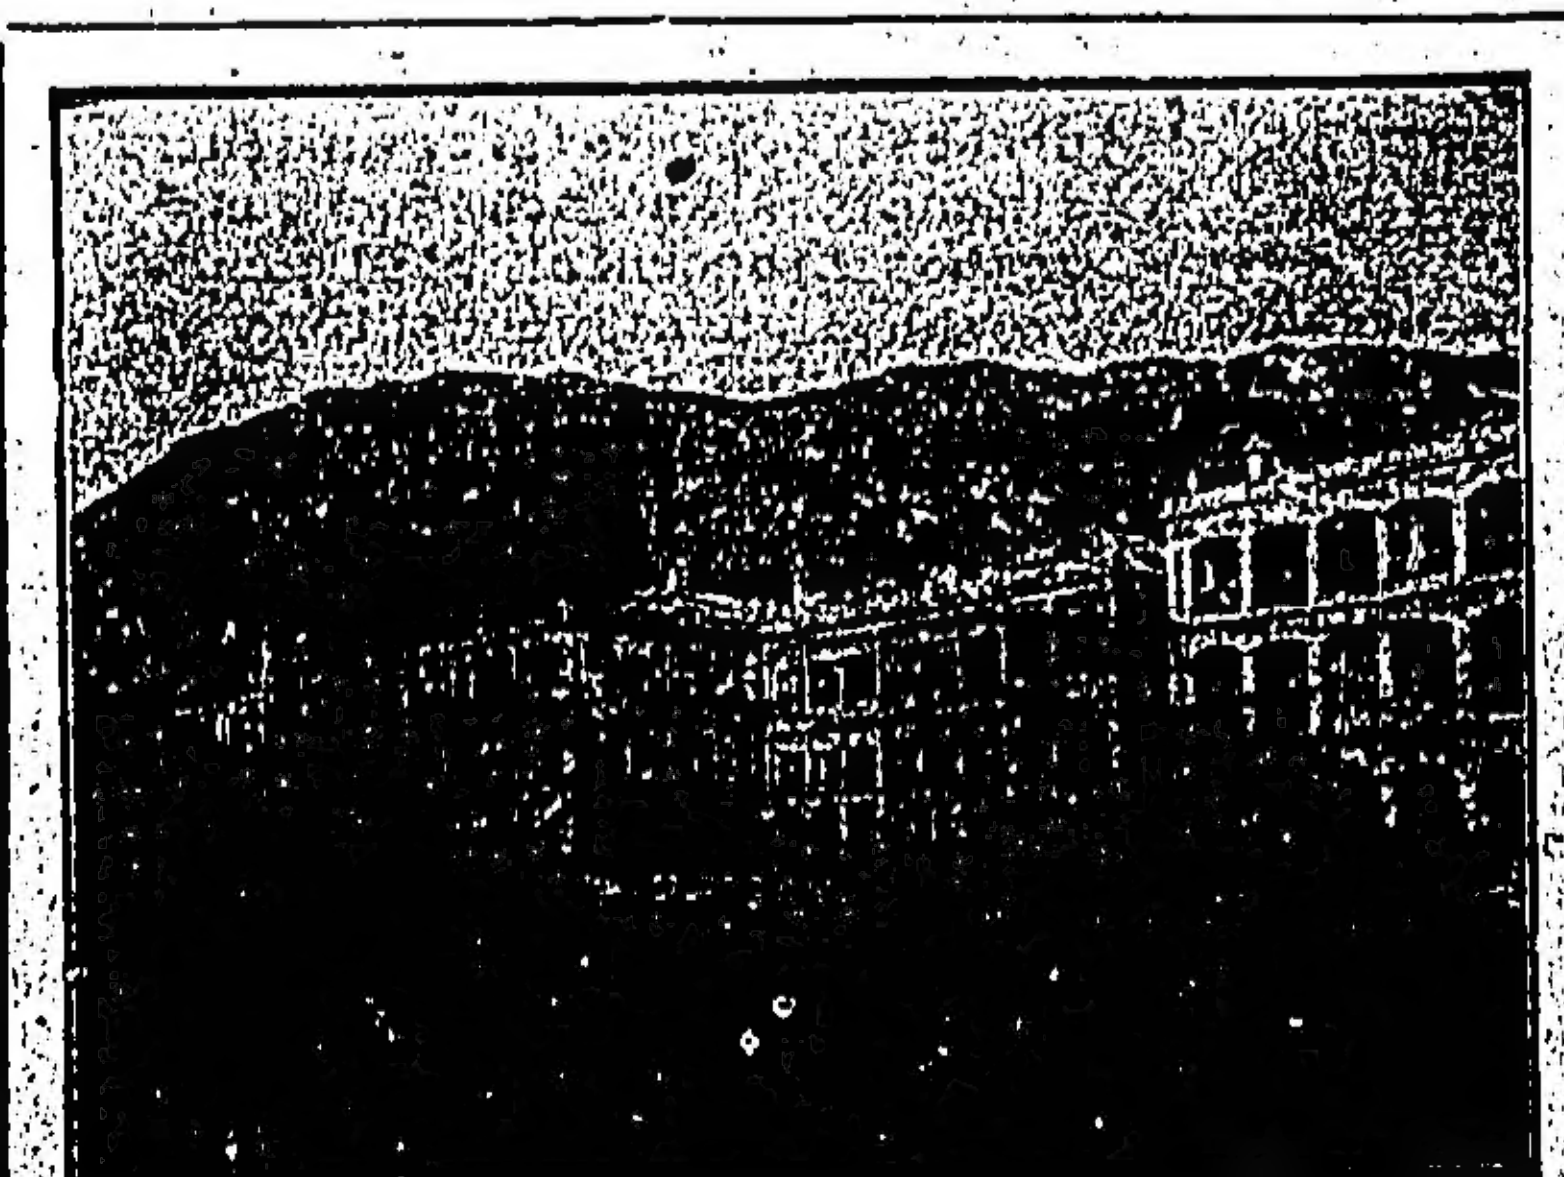

Intimation has just been received that His Majesty the King has approved the award of the Royal Gold Medal for Sir Herbert Baker, A.R.A., F.R.I.B.A., in recognition of the merit in his work as an architect. The Medal will be presented to Sir Herbert Baker at the banquet of the R.I.B.A. on June 28.

ROYAL GOLD MEDAL FOR ARCHITECTURE.

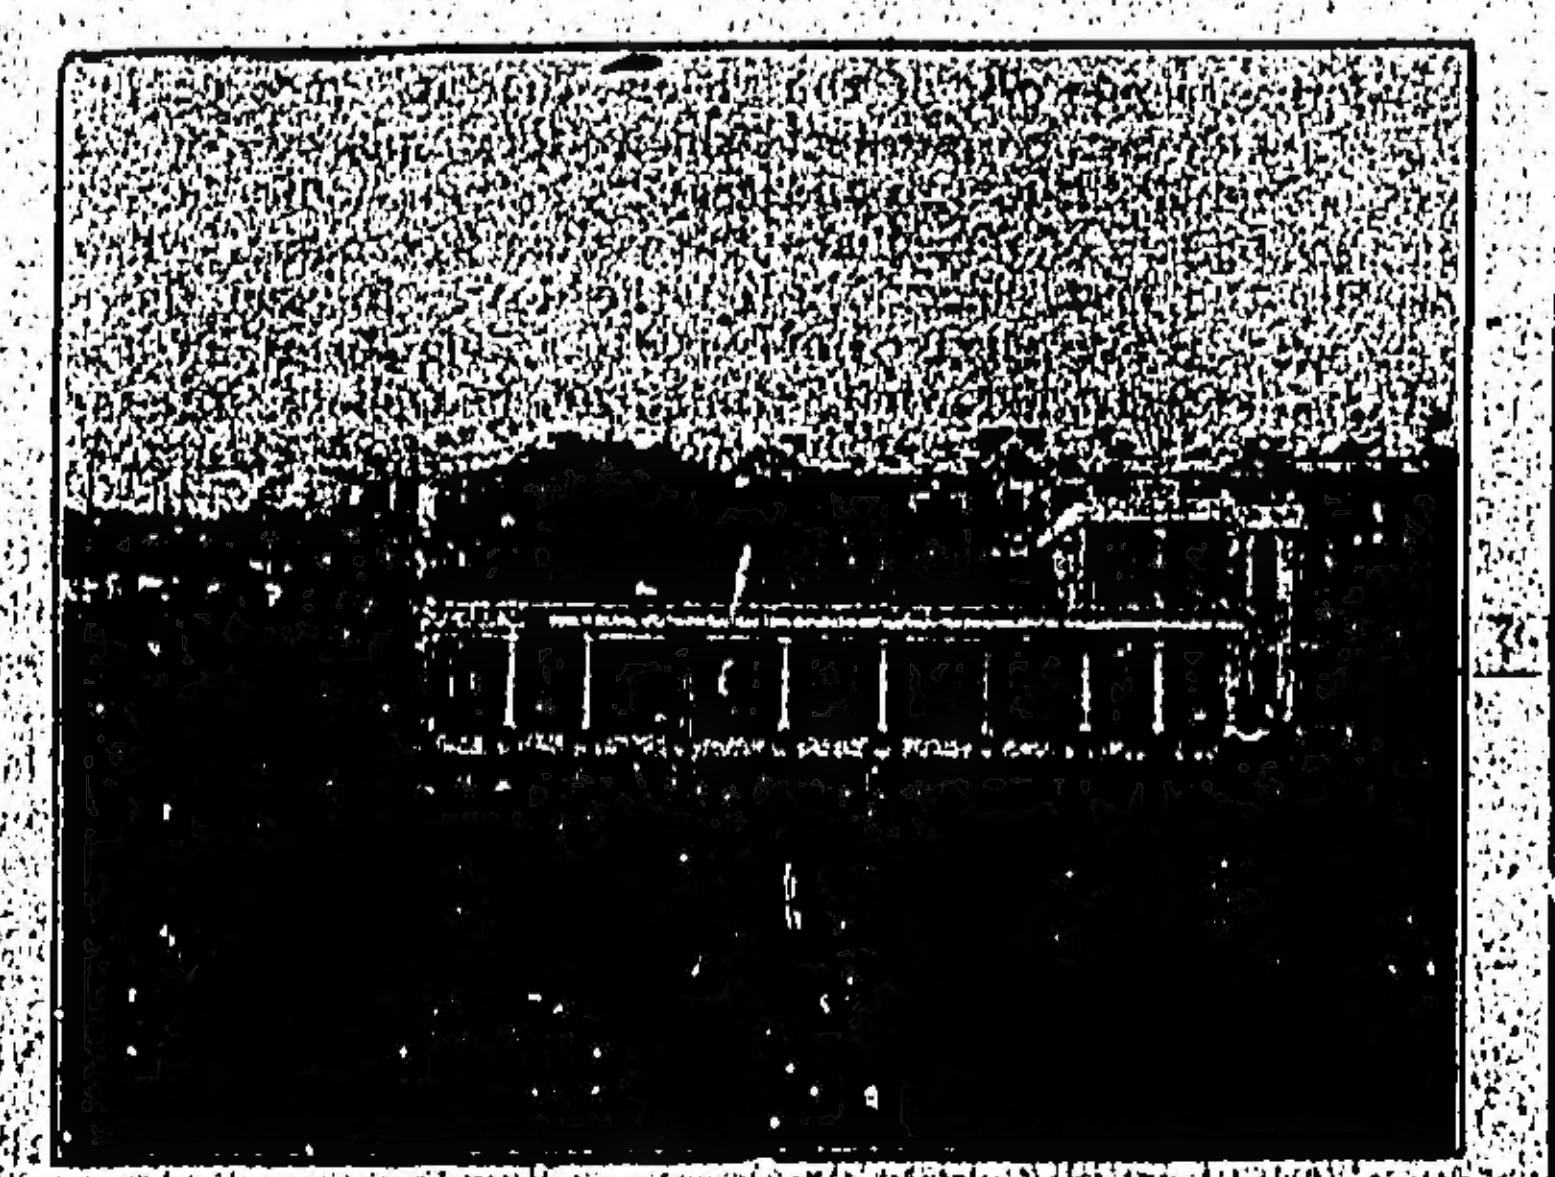

The organising board of the University College of Hull have recently approved the sketch plans of the initial buildings which make provision for all likely needs for some ten years. In the first stage, one complete quadrangular block on the eastern frontage will be erected to accommodate the departments of physics, chemistry, zoology, and geography, a temporary library, and a temporary assembly hall and common rooms, a refectory, and other buildings needed by the staff and students. On the western part of the frontage to Cottingham Road three wings of a quadrangular building will be erected to accommodate administration and a faculty of arts, as well as the department of botany. It is expected that the working drawings will be ready in a few weeks.

ARMS FOR CHINA.

Shipments From German Ports.

London, May 31.

In the House of Commons, Mr. G. Lockyer Lampson, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said that arms valued at 3,813,544 taels had been imported into China in 1925 from German Ports. This, however, did not prove that the arms were manufactured in Germany in contravention of the Treaty of Versailles. There was no occasion to refer the matter to the League of Nations. Shipments of arms were still taking place from Hamburg to China, but the real origin of the arms was uncertain.—Reuter.

MEXICO AND CHINA.

American Journalist's Views.

"Out of the colossal evil of Bolshevism, which has debauched and debased both China and Mexico, will come a common cause, a kinship of the great Anglo-Saxon peoples. Britain and America will ultimately see eye to eye and stand shoulder to shoulder. The destinies of China and Mexico lie in their hands." This was the prophecy of Mr. Isaac F. Marcossin, the well-known American journalist, at a luncheon given in his honour by the American Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Cecil. The American Ambassador (the Hon. Almon B. Houghton), Lord Ashfield, and Lord Inverforth were among those present.

Mr. Marcossin, who was speaking on the subject of "Mexico and China," drew a parallel between the two countries, in which he has travelled extensively in the course of his work for the "Saturday Evening Post." In both countries banditry was rampant and government a farce. The very same disease affected them. In 1925 Mexico was made the base for the Red propaganda of the Soviet Government of Russia in North and South America, and in 1924 Canton became the headquarters for the same propaganda throughout China. "I warn you solemnly," said the speaker, "that if Bolshevism obtains a hold in China to-day it means that there will be an open road for Bolshevism to India, Persia, and the Far East." Under the present conditions neither Mexico nor China was capable of self-government. Only 10 per cent. of the peoples in those two countries were literate. Civil war and anarchy were rampant. In Mexico there had been seventy-three presidents in 100 years. That was one for each year and a half, with an accent on the half. (Laughter.) The speaker claimed the distinction of having interviewed five Chinese Premiers or Presidents in five weeks. (Laughter.) In both countries named cupidity and corruption were camouflaged behind that form of patriotism which a great Englishman described as the last refuge of a scoundrel. So far as the United States was concerned, the whole of the trouble with Mexico lay in the latter's attempt to make the Socialist Constitution of 1917 retrospective. As 90 per cent. of the oil lands owned by Anglo-Saxons were purchased before 1917 this meant that the rights of property were thrown into the melting-pot. It was only in the capable and strong hands of the United States and Great Britain that the true destinies of Mexico and China lay. The first steps for Britain to take, Mr. Marcossin thought, in order to suppress the Red movement in China was to break off all relations with Moscow. Whatever international sins the United States had committed, they had not committed the unpardonable sin of recognising the Moscow Government.

EARLIER MESSAGES.

Foreign Secretary Receives Deputation.

London, May 31.

A deputation, representing the China Committee, waited on Sir Austen Chamberlain, particularly with regard to the safety of British interests in Hankow. The deputation, led by Mr. David Landale, in the absence of Lord Southborough, owing to ill-health, included Sir Alfred Mond, Mr. L. N. Leefe, Chairman of the China Association, representatives of the Federation of British Industries, Asiatic Petroleum Company, British American Tobacco Company, Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, Chartered Bank, and Messrs. John, Swire and Sons.

Sir A. Chamberlain, in reply, said the Government desired to avoid any interference of internal affairs in China, but were fully alive to the importance of the British interests involved and were determined to protect the lives of British nationals and secure protection and fair treatment for them and their property, while continuing to seek a peaceful and friendly solution of all outstanding difficulties with any authority constituted by the Chinese themselves and able both to make and secure the observance of such friendly settlement. Meanwhile, the Government have taken the precautions required by the present unsettled conditions, and have issued the necessary instructions to British authorities in China.—Reuter.

"Times" Comment.

London, May 31.

The "Times," referring to "The Chinese Anarchy" in a leader, expresses the opinion that the reasonableness of British policy in China and the excellent discipline and behaviour of the British troops has clearly begun to impress the more independent and responsible Nationalists, who are using their own eyes instead of looking at the world through glasses made in Moscow. At the same time, the risk of unpleasant set-backs will persist as long as Chiang Kai-shek is unable to keep his warriors in order. Mr. Chen no longer represents the chief Nationalist Government in Southern China and his non-Communist rivals seem to be beginning to show greater comprehension of their international responsibilities; but before they or any future Chinese rulers, who claim to represent China, can win the full confidence of other States and the Concessions they demand, they have to prove that they can guarantee reasonable safety to foreigners pursuing their lawful avocations in China.—Reuter.

Bolshevism Warning.

London, May 31.

Mr. Choo Kia-peng, senior official member of the Federal Council of the Federated Malay States, who is also a leading planter and miner of Malaya, speaking at a largely attended dinner of the Association of British Malaya, in the Hotel Cecil, said there were signs that the evil power of Bolshevism was waning in China and that Britain stood forward as the good Power. Her policy was calculated to serve the true interests of China, and nobody could doubt that this policy would succeed. As a whole the Chinese in Malaya were happy, prosperous and contented, and never wavered in their admiration for the administration of the country and its loyalty to the British Crown.—Reuter.

Japanese Interest.

Peking, May 31.

The rapidly with which the situation is changing is indicated, inter alia, by the fact that Mr. Yoshizawa, who was recently ordered to return to Japan for a conference to discuss the future policy toward China, to-day received instructions to remain at Peking.—Reuter.

Independent Policy.

Tokyo, May 31.

The countermanding of the instruction for Mr. Yoshizawa to proceed to Tokyo, is regarded as reflecting the seriousness of the situation in China. The "Nichi Nichi" predicts the possibility of an Anglo-Russian war in China, in which event it suggests an independent policy on Japan's part.—Reuter.

Borodin Returns.

Shanghai, May 31.

A wireless message from Hankow on May 31 says that Borodin returned to Hankow yesterday from Wuchang. New anti-Chiang Kai-shek and anti-British posters are appearing.—Reuter.

TRADES UNION BILL.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT CLAUSE ADOPTED.

London, May 31.

The House of Commons by 300 to 125 votes adopted clause VI of the Trade Union Bill making it illegal for any local or public authority to make it a condition of employment of a worker that he is a member or a non-member of a trade union.—Reuter.

CAPTAIN LINDBERGH.

London, May 31.

His Majesty the King received Captain Lindbergh at Buckingham Palace this morning and decorated him with the Air Force Cross. Prior thereto he had flown his aeroplane to Gosport where it will be dismantled for shipment to America. He returned to Croft, in one of the Air Force machines which escorted him to the coast.—Reuter.

CHINESE FISHING.

THE VISIT OF A BRITISH PILGRIM.

INCIDENTS ON THE YANGTSE.

Chinese fishing is a disappointment and, as fishermen, the Chinese are a decadent race (writes Arthur Ransome in the "Manchester Guardian"). I went to China rather eagerly, primed with the knowledge that some five hundred years before the Christian era Confucius, whose philosophy is to this day the most influential in China, had fished with rod and line, refusing to use a net. Surely, I thought, if China is full of Confucians, they must follow their great teacher in a matter obviously more important than mere philosophical theory. Old Chinese pictures frequently represent men fishing in a worthy manner. Barbed hooks were known to these people two thousand years before they were introduced to us. I came to China as a pilgrim to the cradle of a religion. I expected to find followers of the true faith seated, bamboo in hand, by every ditch. I was as disappointed as must be those Mohammedans who come to Mecca and find there an elaborate system for fleecing the pious instead of an edifying spectacle of pure religion.

The Last Possible Effort.

The whole time I was in China I saw only two men fishing with rods, and they were not Chinese, but Japanese. I did, however, see a great many fishermen. All, without exception, would be instantly expelled from, for example, the County Palatine Association. The object of the Chinese fishermen seems to be the capture of fish with the least possible expenditure of energy or skill. On the Yangtse the commonest method is as follows. A huge bamboo framework supports a wide, shallow net, which is lowered into the stream close to the bank in places where the fish swim, and is at intervals lifted, when fish that happen to be passing over it are caught. Neither fish nor fisherman is called upon to use more judgment than is necessary in choosing a lottery ticket. Nor does the fisherman use a particle of unnecessary energy. The net would be difficult to lift directly from the water. It is, therefore, suspended from a balanced pole. The fisherman lies comfortably upon the bank smoking his long-pipe. When he chooses, he pulls down a light cord, the pole swings up, the net is lifted with so little effort that he can hold his pipe in one hand and haul up the net with the other. If there are any fish in it he scoops them out with a long-handled landing net. If not, he lets go the cord and the net sinks again under the water. And that is all there is to it. Another method is the setting of long lines of a hundred hooks. These are lowered away over the stern of a boat, which is then anchored, while the fisherman sleeps. When he wakes he hauls in his catch. In the lake of the Summer Palace outside Peking I saw men using four-pronged spears. A more interesting method, but one in which the fisherman earns even less credit, is that of making cormorants do the fishing. Going up the Yangtse, I saw three cormorants flying low over the water and presently settle and dive. In a narrow boat, with perches along its gunwale, a fisherman waited a little way down stream. The cormorants catch fish and bring them back to the fisherman, who suitably rewards them. It is as if in England in a low water an angler should sit on the bank and employ little boys to tickle trout for him. O monstrous degradation.

Catfish and Sharks.

The chief fish to be caught in China are members of the carp family. There are, however, small trout, in the backs in the hills not far from Kiukiang, and, I believe, plenty in Manchuria, where there are too many bandits to leave to anglers the peace of mind their sport requires. There is good sea-fishing in many places, particularly at Wei-hai-wei and Pei Ta-ho, where the bass are of a good size and take a fly heartily. On the way to China, by sea, I fished at Aden, Penang, and Singapore with a tiny rod made for me by Farlows, which I carried in my suitcase, and at all these places caught something. At Aden, sweltering in terrific heat under a sun hat of the 1st of January, I was rowed, with a friend in a rough boat, full of blackamoors to an anchored lighter to which we tied up. Here I got catfish on raw meat. When the tide turned, the lighter, which was very low in the water, swung, and there was a sudden yell of "Fish, big fish!" from the blacks. Something big had been sheltering under the lighter and had been disturbed by its swinging. There was a mighty swirl in the water on the far side of it. I had just caught a catfish, and, jumping from our boat to the lighter, I dangled it at my feet in the place where we had seen the swirl. Suddenly a fair-sized shark, seven or eight feet long, shot up so near that I could easily have kicked his back fin as he turned. He came right up under my feet, turned over, and was gone. I tried desperately to tempt him with the catfish. He would not come again. But at least I had seen a shark, and nearer than I am ever likely to see one again. At Penang, also fishing with raw meat, in the evening, after going to the top of the hill and seeing butterflies as big as soup plates and a centipede a foot long and thicker than my thumb, I tried in the inner harbour under the light of an arc lamp and got a fat fish striped and brightly coloured, which was appropriated by a Japanese, who said it was very good to eat. Also another catfish. At Singapore I fished from the top of a stockade built out into the sea to form a bathing enclosure free from sharks. Here the bait was prawns. I caught two curious fish about half a pound each and then a sea-serpent.

But the only fishing I had actually in China was one afternoon in the Hongkew Park in Shanghai. My steamer postponed sailing by a few hours, and I took the chance. The pond in the Kongkew Park holds nothing but carp, and the day was not a carp day, but one of hard wind and biting cold. It snowed at night. I found there two Japanese, who showed me a photograph of a carp of some eighteen pounds that one of them had caught in the summer. We fished through the afternoon. Each of the Japanese was fishing with six rods. I had one. The total number of rods was thirteen. So that, perhaps we should have caught nothing anyhow. One must not always blame the weather.

A GREAT FILM.

"THE LOVES OF PHARAOH."

While Egypt figures in the newspapers as the scene of a new political crisis, that ancient land is to be seen in the Queen's Theatre as the setting of a truly wonderful film. "The Loves of Pharaoh" is not altogether happily named, for besides being inaccurate, Pharaoh having only one love, the slave girl for whom he sacrifices a kingdom, the title gives the impression that the picture is a mere succession of exotic scenes. That it certainly is not. Exotic scenes there are, of course, but they are kept in their place—where they are both telling and beautiful. The story, which is skilfully unfolded to contrast the destiny of individuals with the destiny of nations, is of absorbing interest, taking the spectator into the homes, the palaces and the temples of the great people who built the Pyramids. The settings are on a magnificent scale, and the battle scenes, including the sack of Thebes, are as wonderful as anything of the sort yet offered by the screen. The acting is superb. Emil Jannings as Pharaoh gives a performance sufficient in itself to make the film a masterpiece. The screening of the picture, needless to say, is faultless, and it is hardly necessary to add that the music of the Queen's Orchestra, under Mr. Grovini, greatly adds to the enjoyment. Atmosphere is also given to the picture by the Egyptian stage setting in which Mr. Seiji Tatsumi, the Japanese tenor, sings his charming songs.

THE RULING TOPIC

In the papers one besetting Topic greets me every day—
I am rapidly forgetting
There are other things to say;
What's the purpose of gazetting
Reparation scheme amounts
When it's crystal clear that betting
Is the only thing that counts?
Par and picture, puff and petting,
Keep the sacred topic warm;
Half mankind is shown as sweating
Over starters and their form;
And if appetites need whetting
There are many titbits rife
Of the sweeps that meant the netting
Of a competence for life.

Thus publicity, curvetting
Round the punter and his dream,
Seems to leave the world coquetting
With one universal theme;
For the bit that isn't betting
Most vociferous has waxed
In discussing (or regretting)
Ways of having betting taxed.

LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

Saturday, June 4, has been proclaimed a general holiday by the Governor-in-Council.

The original pencil manuscript of Wagner's opera, "Das Rheingold," has been sold by the American Art Association to Messrs. Rosenbach, of New York, for $15,400 (about £3,100).

This Friday (being the birthday of H.M. the King), Saturday (a general holiday) and Monday (Whit Monday) are all bank holidays, during which the local exchange banks will be closed to public business.

"Postmarks nowadays are usually indecipherable, and we cannot tell where letters are posted," remarked Mr. Ingleby Oddie, the Westminster coroner, when a witness told him she could not decipher the postmark on a letter she received from her husband.

At the monthly executive committee of the Automobile Association, 11,120 new members of the association were elected. This constitutes a record in the history of the association, the total membership of which is now well over 325,000. The figures indicate a boom in British motoring during the coming season.

During the holidays on Friday, Saturday and Monday, the Fire and Marine Insurance offices of Hong Kong will be closed.

"Gentlemen, snuff is now served." With this announcement, by Mr. J. L. Goldspink, the clerk, a snuff-box was handed round to members at the annual meeting of the Lambeth Board of Guardians. The box, which is of solid, engraved silver, bears the following inscription: Presented by the Board of Guardians of Lambeth for the year 1846 to their successors in office forever to commemorate the good feeling existing between the now united parties.

A marriage in the air is to take place over Berlin very shortly, this being the first of its kind in Germany. The up-to-date bridegroom is Dr. Orlovina, a member of the staff of the Luft Hansa, the German flying organization, who will ascend in an aeroplane with his bride, two witnesses, and the registrar, who will perform the marriage ceremony at the moment the machine is flying over the Town Hall, where earthbound mortals are united in matrimony. The party will then descend to partake of the wedding breakfast, after which the newly-wed couple will leave for Italy for their honeymoon, naturally by aeroplane again.

The only case of notifiable disease which occurred yesterday was that of a Chinese, from the city registration district, with enteric fever (typhoid).

1,000 RUNS IN MAY

W. G. Grace's Record Equalled.

ANOTHER DOUBLE CENTURY.

Hammond, the budding all-rounder of Gloucestershire, has compiled 1,000 runs in first-class cricket at home, a feat that has only been accomplished by the late Dr. W. G. Grace (the "Grand Old Man" of cricket) and Tom Hayward, who was Jack Hobbs's mentor at Surrey.

Another "double" century has been added to this year's bumper crop. The batsman this time is George Gunn, the Nottinghamshire veteran.

London, May 31. County championship and other first-class cricket matches ended to-day resulted as follows:—

Hammond's Game.

At Southampton, Hampshire obtained a first innings' lead from Gloucestershire in an uncompleted match. Scores:— Gloucester (1st innings) 320 runs. Hammond 192. Hants (1st) 421 runs. Kennedy 66. Mead 187. Gloucester (2nd innings) 337 runs for 4 wickets, declared. Smith 100, Neale 145 not out.

Hants (2nd) 135 runs for 4 wks. Hon. L. H. Tennyson 102 not out. (Note: Hammond's career is comparatively short and he is in the prime of life. He showed excellent promise in the 1925 season, particularly as a batsman, also as an exemplary fieldman, and as a bowler. He was kept out of the game last year by illness, hence the absence of his name from the trials for the Tests with the Australians.)

The Latest "Double."

George Gunn made a century in each innings of the match at Trent Bridge in which Nottinghamshire beat Warwickshire by 252 runs. Scores:— Notts (1st) 249 runs. Gunn (C) 100; Mays 6 wickets for 66 runs. Warwick (1st) 231 runs. Parsons 87; Larwood 6 for 87. Notts (2nd) 377 runs for 5 wks. dec. Gunn (C) 110, Walker 144 not out. Lilly 59.

Somerset (2nd) 306 runs. Lee 56, Ingle 71, White 68. Middlesex (2nd) 37 runs for 3 wks.

BASEBALL VISIT.

"ALL-FILIPINO" TOURISTS COMING.

Should the Hong Kong Association's stand at Happy Valley be completed in time, an interesting game will be played over the weekend between a side representing Hong Kong and an All-Filipino team.

The Filipinos are passing through with their manager and captain, Hugo Ramos, on the "President Pierce," which is due this Sunday. They have asked for a game in Hong Kong and if it is at all possible the Hong Kong Baseball Association will arrange it and incidentally give the season a good send-off.

The All-Filipino team is on its way to Honolulu, where a series of games will be played, and will afterwards tour the Pacific Coast.

CAR RACE THRILLS.

Indianapolis, May 31.

A driver named Kohler was killed in a collision at the annual Memorial Day motor car race of 500 miles, when the "President Pierce" was driven by Batten, of Brooklyn, burst into flames and careered round the track blazing. Batten stuck grimly to his post. When his hands were so blistered that he could no longer hold the wheel, he steered with his left foot. He finally succeeded in drawing up.

The race was won by George Souders, who was competing in his first race. He gets a prize of $325,000.—Reuter's American Service.

H.K. CRICKET CLUB.

QUESTION OF EXTENSIONS CONSIDERED.

PROPOSED $38,000 SCHEME.

The improvements to the Hong Kong Cricket Club pavilion (including the addition of a second storey) which were considered by members at a meeting yesterday afternoon were stated to be estimated to cost $38,000. The finances of the Club, said Mr. T. E. Pearce, Chairman, were in a sound position. Liability on debentures was only $1,500 per annum and the Club had been paying this off at the rate of $5,000 per annum. At the Bank they had over $10,000 on fixed deposit and over $5,000 on current account.

The Bank, stated the Chairman, had agreed to an overdraft to cover the cost of the reconstruction of the premises and the Chairman expressed the opinion that it was a move which could be taken with confidence in view of the continued increase in membership. The increase had been 15 per cent. since 1923, and the notice board indicated that the figure of 499 in January, 1927, would be considerably increased by the beginning of January next.

The proposal was then opened for discussion and Mr. G. R. Sayer urged the need for caution. He agreed that the additional improvements were advisable but expressed the opinion that there would be no prospect of increase of revenue due to the alterations.

Mr. Sayer made several suggestions with regard to increase of revenue and thought that the present scheme was not as economical as it might be. He saw no reason for demolishing the present staircase, for instance.

The Chairman went into the questions of figures as to how funds would be available and thought that there was not much reason to worry unless something unforeseen occurred. As regards the alterations which Mr. Sayer had criticised, the Chairman thought that having employed an architect to suggest the best means of carrying out the alterations it seemed a pity to reject his recommendations.

Mr. E. W. Hamilton thought it unfair to the Committee to go thoroughly into the matter at this stage of the proceedings.

Mr. E. B. C. Hornell hoped that they would not quibble about cost. If the Club intended to extend at all, let the job be done thoroughly so that the question would not arise again for a considerable number of years.

The meeting decided unanimously that an extraordinary general meeting of the Club should be called for June 10 when the whole matter would be discussed in connection with a resolution.

DEADLY FEUDS.

THE PASSING OF THE BRIGANDS.

"A THIEF TO CATCH A THIEF."

Owing to the firm line taken by the Italian Government with regard to brigands the orthodox race is dying out in its ancestral haunts in Sicily and Sardinia, says the "Observer."

The last type of outlaw enshrined by popular fancy in romantic terribilita, was Onorato Succu, the young Sardin killed in a fight with carabinieri last month, about whom the "Stampa" of Turin has just published some details.

About twenty years ago a deadly feud broke out between the chief families of Sassari, the Cossu, and the Corraini, who were related to each other and quarrelled partly over an inheritance and partly over a beautiful cousin. One day, while family business was being discussed across a hedge, a member of the Corraini clan was killed, and as the murderer got a favourable sentence in the courts, the outraged cousins took the law into their own hands. For ten years they sought vengeance by murder and persecution of every member of the Cossu clan; a priest sought refuge in Genoa. A truce was called in 1916, and officially signed in presence of the bishop and prefect of Nuoro.

But Onorato Succu, a dashing member of the brigand gang, who had only lately taken the leadership over from the original outlawed Corraini, still remained at large in the mountains. All might have ended well, even for Succu, if he had not been falsely accused of carrying off two children. To shoulder of other people's misdeeds, and of an inferior brand to his own, was more than he could stand; he left his mountain haunts and became a free-lance police agent.

His work was rapid and efficient; he tracked the two men who had abducted the children, arrested them, and handed them over to the police. The criminals were tried and duly condemned.

Succu and his companions returned to their lairs, but, in chastened mood, they abandoned crimes of blood and devoted their energies to amassing goodly possessions in money and herds. During these very profitable activities they had eighteen conflicts with the carabinieri, during which both sides lost men, and two of the brigands were arrested and condemned to penal servitude.

Succu, still bearing a charmed life and always full of dazzling audacity, came to the local mayor one day accompanied by a lovely girl called Serafina, and demanded to be married by civil rites. Was the mayor brow-beaten or only sentimental? In any case the police did not appear on the scene that day. The happy couple climbed to a rustic chapel, where the priest married them.

Soon afterwards the bride was brought into court on a charge of being in possession of firearms. "Why had she not got a licence?" The outlaws' wife was surprised at the question; the judge amazed by hers:—

"If you were a wife would you not try and do everything to please your husband? Everything that he asked you to do?" Onorato Succu came to me in the night some times and asks me to keep these firearms safely for him. Surely you would have done the same in my place."

The judge was as lenient as the mayor to the beautiful girl who is now the widow of the last of the island brigands.

CALCUTTA MEDICAL OPINION.

In 1923 a conference of medical men was held at the School of Tropical Medicine, Calcutta, to discuss evidence in connection with the epidemic which was then raging in the city. In a communication with was issued shortly after the conference it was stated:—

"The one point regarding which a difference of opinion existed was with regard to the mode of transmission of the infection. A few of the doctors in their replies to the questions showed that they were much impressed by the rapidity with which the disease spread and they found it hard to believe that infected mosquitoes were present in sufficient number to account for this."

"On the other hand, all who were present at the conference were agreed that the features of the epidemic were quite keeping with

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

The slender silhouette dominates the mode. Coats for all occasions find the road to chic best reached along slenderizing straight lines. There are many ways of adding interest to the coat without altering its lines, and Paris has created pleasing models through the use of tucks, tiers, scallops, pleats, bindings and stitching.

Some of the most successful coats are made in fine woollens. These are generally quite straight and are often corded to give interest. In some cases the lines slant in front, forming a point in the back. Sometimes they are perfectly plain and straight except for a slight flare placed on the side or front.

Fancy revers mark some simple daytime coats, while others make use of fur to decorate collar, cuffs or pocket. In the more formal coats ermine is the most popular selection—ermine in its natural white or dyed beige or cocoa as the coat demands. Other furs are squirrel, fox, fish or mole. In the sports models, calfskin, "cat" furs and caraculs are seen.

For motoring, the coat with the raglan or semi-raglan sleeve is often used. These coats are straight in line, often with scarf collars or matching scarfs. Large pockets and buttons as well as belts mark their detail.

Billie Dove, whose spring collection of coats is an alluring one, wears for daytime and sports a smart camel's hair coat of slender lines, becomingly collared and cuffed in tan calfskin. Pockets, too, are treated with this new fur trimming. Miss Dove appears in a scene from her First National film, "The Tender Hour," wearing this modern sports coat.

CHILDREN'S TABLE MANNERS.

I have been asked to give a few words on this important subject and to suggest to parents the necessity of training their little boys and girls at an early age how to conduct themselves at the breakfast, dinner, and tea table, says a writer in an Edinburgh paper. I am very much afraid there is little attention paid in this respect, and so long as cups are not upset or a fall from the chair does not occur, nothing else much matters. These, who are now small children, will grow up into an age when they will surely experience a sharp twinge of humiliation when eating in the presence of others who are perfectly at ease in their correct manner.

It would be a good thing and time and trouble well spent if parents were to pay strict attention to the table manners of their children while the latter are quite young. As soon as a child is old enough to

Originality marks the silhouettes which Paris has set her stamp of approval upon in the spring collection of frocks. There is a general departure from lines which have been accustomed to lend chic to the mode.

For instance, there are now gowns with or without waistlines, frocks which feature odd shoulder treatments, bolero effects, the softest blouse effect and skirts of varying lengths and fullnesses. Perhaps one of the most outstanding features is the use of contrasting fabrics in the newest frocks. This striking note introduces not only contrasting materials, but contrasting colours. The two-piece mode, of course, best illustrates this new fashion. The most successful models show colour and fabric details worked with subtlety and a harmonious result.

There is generally to be noted a softening influence in the silhouette. A band of embroidery, or a border of applique, or passementerie, piping, fagoting, cross stitch or any other form of needlework serves to feminize the effect of the dress. In the tiered gown many striking models are shown which display the use of contrasted colours and materials. Other costumes introduce a new note in the geometric plan, with ornament details.

Printed fabrics will hold an important place in the fashions of spring. These in general follow the same lines that are to be found in the frocks of a plain fabric.

The bow is a distinct fashion note of extreme importance. It may be found at all points of the dress, the shoulder, the waist, the hip line or the bow placed at front, at side and in the back.

One of the favourite silhouettes for spring shows a bloused line, a soft, feminine outline, and a snugly defined neckline.

Lois Wilson, whose youth and charm lend themselves with distinct appeal to the femininely inclined frock, finds herself charmingly costumed with all that is new in her First National film, "Broadway Nights." Miss Wilson has selected chiffon in a soft shade of blue. It possesses many features of the new mode. It has a full sleeve caught into a tight cuff. A large flower at the shoulder, in a delicate pink gives colour contrast, while a bow at the waist also marks its newness. The skirt has an uneven hemline and is quite full.

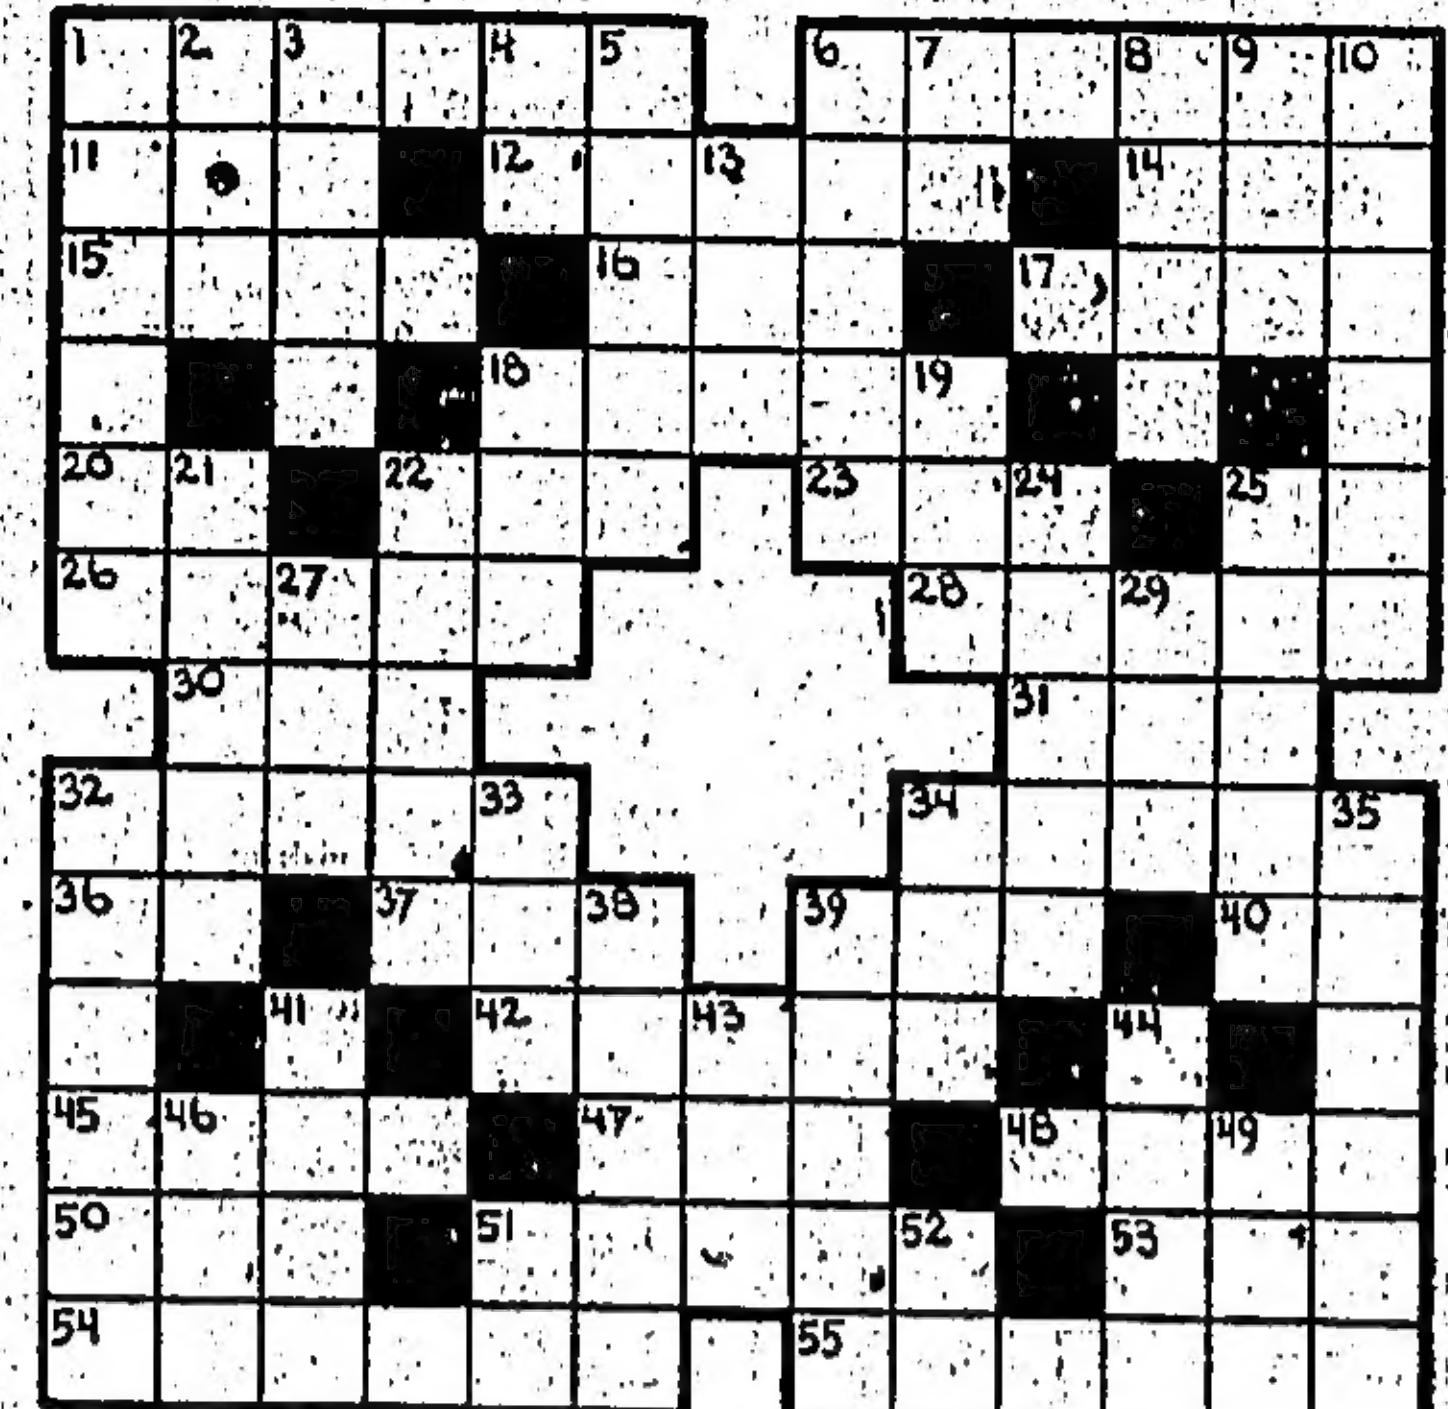

LEISURE AND CLOTHES.

The witty and the learned have been talking about the "Menace of the Leisureed Woman." One of the oldest pronouncements was the statement that "the clothes we have to-day are only invented for a leisureed class that does not have to work, and has most of its time to play with, and to wear flimsy clothes that need constant renewal and washing."

I was amazed at the above remark, for when leisure for women is discussed, the first thing that

SUGGESTIONS FOR SOLVING CROSS-WORD PUZZLES.
Start out by filling in the words of which you feel reasonably sure. These will give you a clue to other words crossing them, and they in turn to still others. A letter belongs in each white space, words starting at the numbered squares and running either horizontally or vertically or both.

(The solution of the above cross-word puzzle will appear in to-morrow's issue along with a new cross-word puzzle.)

springs to my mind is that the middle-class girl who work and the wives of middle-class men now do have some time to spare in their busy lives, because modern fashions have lightened the dress-slavery under which a past generation of women lived and worked (writes Jane Ramsay-Kerr in the "Evening Standard.")

The leisureed woman once only existed among the very wealthy—now there are quite a number of feminine creatures who run their houses, or earn a living wage, and yet manage to enjoy a certain amount of spare time because they are not eternally sewing on buttons, hooks and tapes, threading lingerie with ribbons, and washing and ironing scraps of white muslin and lace.

ODDS AND ENDS

Imagination.

The strongest element of the English genius is imagination; the imagination which has found vent all through our history in our passion for the far-flung places of the world, and in our old love of adventure and the unknown, but which is shown most clearly in our literature. Our poetry is richer in imagery, the natural language of the imagination, than any other. Frequently the imaginative element takes the place of passion (in which we are naturally deficient it seems), of emotion, of sensibility, and often even of thought. It is at once the glory and the danger of English art.—Veronica Rice in "The Contemporary Review."

A Beautiful Language.

Myself, I have a weakness for things French, even for things the Frenchman himself would be the first to admit are not always beautiful. Somehow they have wheeled their way into my affections. For instance when I see "Defense d'afficher" written on a blank wall I am at once conscious of a warm sense of well-being. It stirs me to an emotion that "Stick no bills" does not. I don't want to stick bills on anybody's walls; French or English, but I prefer being told not to in French. Why, I don't know, but there it is. Similarly, I love the large signs like "Byrrh," "Dubonnet—Quinquina," and other homely disfigurements of the countryside for reasons quite apart from the refreshments they suggest. "Pneu," which nobody wants to consume—or pronounce, if it can be avoided—affects me in the same way. Then take street names. What a study they are in themselves! I should like to make a collection of them—Rue Viande Froide, Rue de la Tête Noire, Rue Pain Perdu; names like that. Why, the commonplace could not breathe in such streets, and one could no more alter these titles than one could rechristen the Rue de Massacre here in Chartres. Fancy your butcher—families waited on daily—having an address like that. Look at the personality you can get; the association of ideas. No, there's nothing dull about these old streets, false-front them how you may. Every gable in them is a dog-eared page of romance.—Ingles Sheldon-Williams. — "A Dawdle in France" (A. & C. Black, Ltd.)

The Correct Lover.

He was so completely the correct lover of mature years; he would bend stiffly from the hips and kiss her hand; he seemed better at kissing hands than kissing lips. In fact there were times when she had the feeling that he was afraid of her, though what he could fear in her was beyond her comprehension. Yet his kisses were tentative and self-conscious, as though he were thinking about the quality of his kissing even when he was in the midst of it. She was a little bewildered. His breath never came more quickly when he was near her. She still thought of him as strong and silent, and Spanish, and she had held her breath and waited for the fire beneath to reveal itself. She had been mesmerized by a mystery, by a little god of her own making, but her delirium continued to be grandly inarticulate and benignly silent. It was a shy and obscure god. She sought to cling, and he was as stiff as a post, a kind of post, a martyr's stake. For the piece of wood that was Freem yearned to become the young tree, and hoped that the miracle might happen, and was afraid that it would not happen. And the very fear inhibited the transformation, and he continued to be the post—Warwick Deeping, "Doomsday" (Cassell.)

How do you wake these mornings? Fresh and fit, or dull, depressed and ill-tempered? If the latter most probably your liver is to blame, for which trouble Pinkettes are the ideal remedy. As gently as nature Pinkettes stimulate the liver, dispel constipation, banish biliousness, and sick headaches, clear the skin, purify the blood, prevent diarrhoea and dysentery, relieve Piles. Of chemists, or post free, 60 cents the vial from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60, King's Road, Shanghai.

"Noo Yawki"

Broadway at night is a stupendous electrical spectacle, but turn aside into 58th Street West and you immediately step into the gloom and equal of an isolated Negro Street. Walk east from 58th Street, Fifth Avenue for five minutes and you will find a cheap and vulgar squalor that could not be easily duplicated. It is but a step from the canyons of the Wall Street section to the Bowery, where anything is liable to happen after dark.—J. H. McCulloch, in "The English Review."

Genius.

I do not believe that any work of genius (talent is another matter) has been produced by one human creature without another human creature being concerned in the act of creation. A play, a poem, a picture, must have its parents like any other child of controlling spirit and obedient flesh; the actual relationship matters little—mother, sister, lover, wife, patient, servant—all these have served in turn his brush, his chisel, his pen. But the fact does stand out, all human experience teaches, that it is at the light of some human creature's eye that the improved artist lights his torch. And then? Why, it's over the hills and as far away as his genius can run. If he is a supreme genius he'll want no help to keep it alight. But to light it he has had to turn to another, and nine times out of ten that other is a woman—Clemence Dane—"The Woman's Side" (Herbert Jenkins).

The Poet Michael Bruce.

In his last illness, one of his fellow students, the late Dr. Lawson, of Selkirk, who happened to be preaching as a candidate for the congregation of Mr. Mair, at Milnathort, called upon him. Mr. Lawson found the poet in bed, "very pale, his eyes large and lustrous, but delighted to see his unexpected visitor." Mr. Lawson observed to him that he was glad to find him so cheerful. "And why," said he, with noble trustfulness, "should not a man be cheerful on the verge of heaven?" "But," said his friend, "you look so emaciated, and I am afraid you cannot last long." "Quickly, and with a flash of the humour of his healthful days, he answered, 'You remind me of the story of the Irishman who was told that his novel was about to fail, and I answer with him, 'Let it fail, it is not mine,' or perhaps his words were, 'It is not me.''" Soon after this, on July 5, 1907, Bruce "imperfectly fell asleep" in death, aged twenty-one years and three months. His Bible was found upon his pillow, marked down at Jer. xxii. 10. "Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him," and on the blank leaf, was written—

"Tis folly to rejoice and boast
How small a price my Bible cost.
The day of judgment will make clear

"Twas very cheap—or very dear."
—John Guthrie Barnes, in "Life and Works of Michael Bruce, Poet of Lochleven."

On Eating.
Eating is obviously one of the really sincere and first-hand pleasures which are quite independent of precedent or tradition. It is true that people eat far too much and far too often, that they constantly eat at hours and under circumstances which must make it quite impossible for them to get any pleasure out of it at all. (For instance, to mix food with public speeches is an outrage, turning a pure and primitive delight into a refined and complicated torture). But for all that, eating is an occupation we all enjoy and should feel lost without. I believe we shall continue to spend several hours of every day in doing it, even if the time comes (fore-shadowed in Mr. Haldane's Dadaism) when it is possible to be painlessly and joyously nourished by swallowing now and again a small capsule containing all the ingredients necessary to life. A day without meals! It stretches before us an arid, unpunctuated waste. But we might with advantage revolutionise our existing timetable and menu, though we are certainly right in our present-day habit of rarely eating alone. Eating alone is a dreary and almost a disgusting occupation. One's mouth becomes a mere slot; everything tastes like sawdust; one rises after five minutes' hectic wolfing, satiated to suffocation, with a dull pain. But we might have fewer solid, ceremonial sit-down meals, and more sporadic nibbling in gardens at odd moments. We might have eggs and bacon breakfast at night instead of first thing in the morning. (There is nothing in the world so good at 11.30, after a public meeting or a play). We might have cheese, that wholly satisfying food, at the beginning instead of at the end of meals, when one is usually too replete to touch it. We might have more, much more Devonshire cream and lettuce, and honey, and fresh toast, shrimp, wild strawberry, and new bread in our lives; and much less custard, cauliflower, fancy biscuits, consommé, Jellies, bread and butter, pudding, ham sandwiches, cocoas, veal cutlets, and suet cakes. Is there anything except habit which induces any one of us to swallow any of these things? Speaking for myself alone, I can quite honestly say no.—Violet Bonham Carter in "Good Housekeeping."

The Greatest Character Actor of the Age in a role that does him justice!

Read what the Papers have said:

"A tremendous motion picture spectacle, an exciting picture of battles and sweeping masses of men, an imposing architectural composition and a humanly personal story of kings and slaves of ancient Egypt"—New York Times.

"With its gigantic mass effects, its stupendous architectural backgrounds, its rushing mob scenes, the humanness of the story itself and of the characters who move through it to measures of love, hate, revenge and petty tyranny, is never lost"—New York Morning Telegraph.

"Centuries rolled away and the dead past become the living present"—New York Journal.

"One of the majestic pictures of the decade, as mysteriously fascinating as the Sphinx"—New York Herald.
